

SPRULL AND MOORE SEE STATE'S ARMY

Executive Soldier With Guard in Annual Encampment at Mount Gretna

PRICE GREETING GOVERNOR

By a Staff Correspondent Camp Fetter, Mt. Gretna, Aug. 11.—Governor Sprull, Mayor Moore, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Moore, of Pittsburgh, with the colors today, soldiering with Pennsylvania's new army of khaki.

Morale Impresses Sprull Governor Sprull was obviously captivated by the pick and span appearance of the camp, and the morale of the bronzed guardsmen.

The soldiers appear interested in their work. We heard do too much to encourage the new guards, Pennsylvania is big enough to have the largest and best equipped camp ground in the country, and Mount Gretna seems to be just a

City's Quota Small "The city's quota is not as strong as it should be. To encourage recruiting, I recently advised the directors of the city departments to permit city employees to have the two weeks at camp, in addition to their regular vacations."

Standing beneath his flag flying above headquarters, the Governor at 4:30 o'clock reviewed the men of the Keystone Division in the morning. In review for the first time since they marched up Broad street fourteen months ago, in the reviewing party with him will be General Price, and his staff, visiting officers, Mayor Moore and Mayor Habcock.

In a natural amphitheater of green hills, the parade ground rolls slightly up to the headquarters of the camp, where the reviewing party, mounted, and glittering with high hats, stars and eagles, will take their positions as the stalwart veterans and carefully stepping recruits file past with "eyes right."

Before the review the Governor, in his official car, and preceded by his troop, will make an inspection tour of the camp with General Price.

STANDARD OF GAS CUT BY NEW JERSEY BOARD

Utilities Commission Reduces Requirement 75 Thermal Units and Approves Price Boost

The heating standard of gas used throughout New Jersey has been lowered from 600 British thermal units to 525 British thermal units, and the Public Utilities Commission, Philadelphia, has approved a price boost.

The change in the heat units is to commence at once, and must be completed by November 1. All necessary changes in gas heaters and ranges to accommodate them to the new standard must be made by the purchaser at his expense.

The board said in its decision: "The increasing demand for gas, and resultant increase in cost, greatly affect the cost of manufacture of water gas. Three-quarters of the gas manufactured in this state is water gas. The rest is coal gas."

"The Crank" Is Sued for $12,000 Ransom

Mr. Coughlin and his attorney, Major Larzelere, were away from Norristown this morning. Mr. Larzelere was back by noon, but would say nothing about the case.

A trip through Pasquale's former haunts here, with Pasquale as "Exhibit A," was arranged late yesterday afternoon and it proved beyond doubt, the police say, that Pasquale has been lying, especially in his story about "Joe."

No person was found who had ever seen "The Crank" with the exception of "Joe," said the police. Danachuck, a Russian and former jailbird acquaintance of Pasquale.

Pasquale was anxious to make the trip, saying he felt sure he would be able to identify the trolley in which the ransom was paid. He was accompanied by Danachuck, a Russian and former jailbird acquaintance of Pasquale.

Some interesting information, however, was uncovered by the investigators during their personally conducted tour of "The Crank." But nothing to support Pasquale's stories. The lavish way Pasquale spent money was the principal subject discussed by those who knew "The Crank."

George Kahler, bartender in a saloon at Ninth and Vine streets, said that at the same time he was in the company of $12,000 was deposited by Mr. Coughlin. Pasquale had displayed thirty-three $100 bills, one of which he requested Kahler to change for him.

"I've just pulled off a job down in Baltimore," Pasquale is reported by Kahler as saying, "and I want some money to pay the taxi man who drove me back from there. It's the same money I'm going to give you for the shirt under my arm and then I think I'll buy a farm for myself."

Kahler says that Pasquale at the time carried a revolver which he showed to the police. He also showed the picture of "The Crank" which was first published in the newspapers. Kahler recognized it as a picture of a man who had information he knew.

Confession Shattered The personally conducted outing yesterday afternoon, which was part of the "confession" foisted off by Pasquale as being the true story of the kidnapping, the tale, as related by the police, was shattered by the facts.

Pasquale maintains that he never saw the baby, but he said he had seen the child in Philadelphia, and "Joe" left for New Gretna, N. J., where he had a farm, leaving "Joe" in charge of the child. He said he had seen "Joe" on Saturday morning drive over to the farm at New Gretna. Later in the day "Joe" left him.

One of the places where Pasquale said he had been with both "Joe" and his wife was Little Bros. store on the afternoon of Friday, July 31, when he purchased a sheet and some other bedclothing.

Investigation at the store revealed the fact that on the day previous, Thursday, Pasquale had bought a spread of bed linen from a retail merchant, brother of Magistrate Imber, a salesman in the main department, and had paid for them with a $10 bill.

"I remember him distinctly," said the girl when she saw a picture of "The Crank." "He pulled out an immense roll of bills when he paid for the sheet. I told him that the sheet was slightly defective and was selling for a lower price, but he smiled and said that it would suit his purpose all right."

Neither Imber nor Miss Mount could remember having seen any companions with Pasquale, and both were reasonably sure that he had been the alone delegate to the Imperial Press Conference.

POLAND TO SURVIVE DECLARES VAUCLAINE

Says Bolshevik Wave Cannot Permanently Engulf Nation, Despite Danger

Poland is in no danger of being permanently engulfed by the Bolshevik wave that is now flowing over her, according to Samuel M. Vaucaine, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

"I have absolute confidence in the Polish people," he said today. "Upon my trip abroad the last time I only spent two weeks in Poland, and I would not presume to sit down and try and tell a lot about the political and economic conditions in that country. People who try to do that tell things as they would like to see them, perhaps."

"Poland is a nation of 30,000,000 people, and a nation of 30,000,000 people is not overrun as easily as you might think. The nations will not stand by and see Poland permanently overthrown by a mob."

BUSINESS MEN ACT ON TRANSIT PROBE

Petition Asks Quashing of Writ Delaying Action on Underlying Companies

FAITH IN SUPREME COURT

Counsel for the United Business Men's Association will take another step in a few days as a means of expediting investigation of the underlying companies of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co.

A petition to the Supreme Court to quash a writ of subpoena granted by the Superior Court which halts immediate investigation of the companies, will be filed by C. Oscar Beasley and William H. Gage.

Mr. Beasley said the action of the Superior Court in preventing the commission from making an immediate investigation was a surprise to all interested in the present controversy. "Such action in my mind," he said, "makes the commission almost useless. I believe, however, that the Supreme Court will take a different view of the matter."

"If the Supreme Court does not remedy this situation it is altogether likely that the underlying companies' lawyers will be able to drag the hearings, protests and red tape along until next year and postpone almost indefinitely the settlement of this question. But I have no doubt that the Supreme Court will put a summary stop to this whole process of procrastination."

The directors of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. will meet on Monday afternoon, but so far as has been disclosed have no special administration program to consider.

At a special meeting in Harrisburg yesterday, the commission received notice of the writ of subpoena and directed its counsel, P. H. Evans, to represent the commission at a hearing on the question before the Superior Court during the week of October 4.

COGNAC LEAURED VILLA SURRENDER

Bandit Would Embrace Worst Enemies After Few Draughts From Bottle

OUTLAW TO LIVE ON RANCH

San Pedro, Conchula, Mexico, Aug. 10.—(Delayed)—Francisco Villa, after years of banditry and defiance of both the Mexican and the United States governments, the famous outlaw delivered himself up today to the federalists this afternoon, and drowned his sorrows in a bottle of cognac.

He met General Eugenio Martinez, the federal commander, under an old treaty which gave him five miles from San Pedro. Villa marched as far as San Pedro with his men.

There was a general handshaking, and the bandit's words were pressed. Villa's differences with the central government were speedily drowned in the fiery liquor. After the reformed bandit had taken several draughts without a change, he passed the flag and it went from hand to hand, from lip to lip around the circle, and eventually back to Villa again.

After Pancho had enjoyed his second turn at the bottle, he sent it on its journey again and said, with a characteristic smile: "I'm ready now to embrace my worst enemies."

The quip was appreciated by the federal officers, who were quick to laugh loudly and manifest to utmost fervor, "I have no doubt that the Supreme Court will put a summary stop to this whole process of procrastination."

At a special meeting in Harrisburg yesterday, the commission received notice of the writ of subpoena and directed its counsel, P. H. Evans, to represent the commission at a hearing on the question before the Superior Court during the week of October 4.
