GOSSIP OF THE STREET

While sentiment was greatly cheered by the substantial rebound from the depression in the earlier part of last week, it was the consensus of opinion ong the more important trading inposition of the market would come this week. It was pointed out that the recovery was largely made at the expense of the short interests. The continuation of the reliable to the short interests. inuation of the rallies therefore will dtpend in a measure to the extent of the still outstanding bear accounts, and the therwise buying power of the market. Confidence of maintaining the forward swing was greatly lessened after the publication of the bank statement disclosing the reduction of the excess again. The inability of the larger institutions to hold up the reserves, accordingly, gives little promise of any cordingly, gives little promise of any immediate change in money market conditions. Money rates, it is true, are no higher, nor as high, as they were a fortnight ago, but it is as difficult, if not more difficult, to obtain the necessary financial accommodations for

It is in September and October, as matter of fact, that the real demand money develops. Cotton and cereals require large sums in their move-ment to market, and, in view of heavy business loans already outstanding and which are being slowly liquidated, it seems inevitable that reserves will suffer considerable deterioration in

That, in turn, apparently forshadows a still further tightening of the purse strings by the banks, in so far as the Strength of B. and O. Stock The unusual strength and activity of Baltimore and Ohio stock the last two or three days has come in for considerable attention. The buying, according the stock market will begin to discount board-room reports, was of the widespread belief in market circles that it will be one of the first rails to get back on a dividend basis. Street gossip, however, has it that influential speculative combinations have been formed in many of the low-priced railroad stocks. It was also said that the movement in Baltimore and Ohio was engineered by a pool which transferred its activities from Southern Railway.

The same story was told about Reading that has been heard ever since the Supreme Court handed down the decision several months ago that banking interests are accumulating the stock with the intention of retaining it until the assets of the company are distributed.

As a matter of fact, in view of the extensive propaganda which has been carried on to bolster up interest in the rails, it is surprising that more material results have not been accom-Although many false starts have been made in the bull campaigning of the group, it is reasonably certain that it will eventually come in for a big share of attention and probably be made the real market leader.
