What the Architect Knows
Eli Jones concluded to build a house. He and his wife decided on the general style and materials—or thought they had—and made a rough plan; but they wisely called in an architect just to put their ideas into proper shape.
The result of calling in the architect was that by using common brick with face-brick trimmings, instead of face-brick and cement, Mr. and Mrs. Jones got a beautiful house with two rooms and a sleeping-porch more than they had planned; they got also a basement garage, saving the entire cost of a separate building; and they got the whole for a little less than the total cost they had figured on.
Why? Because their architect knew the possibilities of common brick, which they didn't; and he knew how to handle the materials so as to get effects of which they had never dreamed.
A good architect knows what can be done with common brick, and how to handle it. You don't. Be wise before you begin, not when you are through—get an architect at the start.

All Are New—Cancellations Made to the Manufacturers and the Blankets Never Were Opened

For whatever reason, coming winter prices for blankets are scheduled to be higher than hitherto—certainly much higher than these Government Blankets can be bought for tomorrow.

Months ago the Government ordered, and paid. Then the war stopped and these blankets at once became "Surplus Property"—and, as it turned out, the Government had to re-sell them at less than it paid: an unavoidable war loss that has worked around into a gain for you!
