MRS. WILSON PLANS MEALS FOR THREE DAYS

With Careful Marketing in Person, the Housewife Can Get Necessary Provisions for Moderate Prices-Goulash Recipe

why the average housewife dreads or dislikes to supervise her marketing personally is perhaps due to the fact that she seldom tries to make a special study of this part of her household duties and therefore she is quite apt to run along from week to week in the same old rut.

She just plans to have meat, pota toes, a vegetable, sometimes a salad and a dessert. Most assuredly it is a that the housewife who proclaims that she sets only the plainest table is quite likely the one whose meat and grocery bills are much higher than her neighbor's. Yet she fails to understand that it is the thought and time that put into the preparation of the dish. rather than the money spent, that per mits her neighbor to have an infinitely larger variety and to serve more fancy

Braises, stews goulashes, ragouts have inexpensive meat bases, and when served in individual baking dishes, custard cups and ramekins they take on quite a festive air. Croquettes, cut-lets and eminces, too, are easy to make cuts. and afford variety. Their plebeian base is masked with sauces, gravies and garnishes with attractive flavorings. The less expensive table d'hote din ners served in the Latin Quarter in New York and other cities are eagerly sought and enjoyed by the epicure and lover of good foods, and yet when you sum up the whole meal you have a generous helping of soup, usually a regetable one, a liberal helping of one of the Italian pastas or perhaps its cut ivalent, the Belgian, Swiss or Huncarian dumpling, with a meat flavor. cauce or gravy, a salad and a dessert and a cup of good course.

Surely any housewife can prepare meal that will not only compare but. to me, one that will far surpass it, if she will but put her mind to the mar-

When the Stomach Strikes

A little lady friend of mine (this has passed the censor!) gave me the ollowing little skit.

She refuses to say whether she wrote it, stole it, found it, or anything else about it other than that she thought it would make good "summer reading." I thoroughly agree with her and here's hoping you will, too. It is called the "Diary of a Stomach." and runs along like this

What He Told Her Dear Cynthla-I simply cannot Remorseful's" letter pass without a comment. I am an Irish girl and have only been in the country five months and during that time have amused myself reading Cynthia's column. It is both amusing and instructive. I do not know what opinion the American male section have of we Irish, but I certainly can vouch for the decent Irish girl. vouch for the decent Irish girl. A young man in Ireland told me that he kept company with a number of girls and believes he could have married any one of them, but got disgusted with them because they cheapened taemselves. He says no fellow has a grain of respect for the girl who permits liberties. This young fellow was engaged to be married when I came away and knowing I was going away he was more confidential than usual and told me that the girl he hopes to make his wife has restored his faith in the virtue of womankind. He argues that any girl who allows herself to be "mushed" over before being married would certainly allow the same after marriage.

Lost Money and Dresses

Dear Madam-Will you kindly help me again, as you have helped me before? On June 2 I sent to New York for two dresses, inclosing check to pay the reason why they did not send morchandise ordered. They do not answer my letters. So I wrote and told them to return my check if they could not fill order. My check has been cashed made out. They ignore my letters and I do not see why I should lose my money. Will you kindly advise me what I could do about getting my money back? PUZZLED.

If you cannot get satisfaction through the mail the best way to manage this is to go straight to the mail order department and ask in person for your money or the dresses. You can prove that the money was sent if the check was made out to the store. If you cannot go to New York and see about it write to the manager of the shop and tell him that the dresses have not been sent. You can consult your lawyer, or the Legal Ald Society, 34 South Sixteenth street, about the proper procedure.

If you cannot get satisfaction through the fleas.

Get a spray, or else use a sewing-machine oil can, and fill it with corrosive sublimate, turpentine or keroseae. Go over every room which is infested by sublimate, turpentine or keroseae. Go over every room which is infested by these pests every dáy, shooting the liquid into every crack and on the walls and furniture. Dear Mndam—Will you please give me full directions about making a Tur-kish costume and also a Chinese cos-tume? Also, what material could be used and how would the hair and headdress for these costumes be arranged?

A READER. To make a Turkish costume get a full skirt of some bright color and sew the back and front of the hem together, making openings in the two side seams for the feet. This makes the regular harem skirt. Then make a full waist with a round, low neck and short sleeves and wear a wide girdle with long ends. Beads of all kinds should be worn around the neck and bracelets and rings are also part of the costume. The head-dress consists of a wide chiffon veil that
