

UNTRAINED GIRL CANNOT BUILD UP HAPPY HOME

Mrs. Wilson Declares Mistaken Mothers Often Drive Daughters Into Wreck of Happiness

By MRS. M. A. WILSON

My traveling companion quoted these lines to me: "Help me to realize that we are not creatures, but the masters of all our destinies."

She did not remember whence or from whom this little motto had been taken, and she was so earnest in her belief that we can shape our destiny for happiness that I feel compelled to pass on to each housewife the gist of her two-hour conversation.

The bondage of motherhood seems to have a common tie with every mother and the pride and love the young mother feels for her children shines like a beautiful halo around her.

My lecture work brings me in contact with thousands of women each year and I am truly surprised at the great number of young women who leave their mothers' homes for their own, without sufficient knowledge of how to prepare a good cup of coffee.

Some mothers will tell you that they would rather do it themselves and that makes such a lot of dirt and fuss and quite a few others maintain that they won't let their daughters cook because they waste their money.

Christmas Day

Diana and Julian, long after three years of dull, prosaic married life, decided to separate.

Diana dreaded the holidays. Last year she and Julian had had a wonderful Christmas, but she had decided to have a Christmas party for the girls in the conventional diamond.

Christmas morning the two women slept late, and when they awoke they found Diana had been to the office for a quiet Christmas dinner.

Under the tree, Diana found a pair of earrings, exquisitely set in old gold and with black onyx drops.

Unusual Blouses

A Daily Fashion Talk by Florence Rose

A taffeta overblouse with pipings and bandings of contrasting satin is worn by the figure as a suggestion to the business or professional woman. The chiffon blouse with the round neck is shown at the left as an idea for more dressy occasions.

"What is the best material for blouses?" is a question that women sometimes ask. Again you will hear a woman exclaim, "I do not like georgette for blouses."

The Golden-Plated Rule

By Lillian Paschal Day

The Snorer

I tried letting out a rooster. Living alone is horrid. I might get sick or something. And I'm afraid of burglars.

Adventures With a Purse

WHETHER I am with some one or alone, I always carry change with me because without wanting to be a proverbial wet blanket "one never knows what will happen."

Making More Money

The Boy Who Wouldn't Work. "Jimmy" Spudon was very busy. He had more energy than any other boy of his age around Brooklyn.

The Question Corner

- 1. What is "Pan Anclen"?
2. Describe a new kind of "life preserver" which enables the beginner in swimming to float like an expert?
3. What pretty accessory to the toilet set would make a nice holiday present, or "bridge gift"?

Yesterday's Answers

- 1. An ingenious new device for carrying mail at a walking pace is a "bomb" of cardboard which shoots confetti with a bang when a string is pulled.
2. Left-over pieces of material from the making of a fall suit can be pieced together with inserts of knitted wool, and used as a scarf.

Please Tell Me What to Do

By CYNTHIA

Two Troubled Togethies. Cheer up, my friends. When you grow up you'll feel better.

Nom de Plume. No, they are certainly not all like that. Drop the young woman's acquaintance.

Cannot Comply. Worried—We have no list of ministers living in Elkton, so cannot give name or address.

Wants More Romance. Dear Cynthia—I am writing for advice concerning my happiness. I've been engaged almost two years to a quiet, refined fellow, but with all his kindness and devotion I don't love him.

PERPLEXED NINETEEN. Real love is not a continual state of excitement. On the contrary, a decided peace of mind and soul accompanies true love.

A Bit Out of Cynthia's Line. Dear Cynthia—Suppose one has a newspaper or department of a newspaper should it be sent?

Face Has Blemishes. Dear Madam—I have a few pimples on my face and would appreciate it if you could tell me how to get them off.

Color Came Off on Front. Dear Madam—I have a dress with red buttons. The red buttons faded, and left red spots on various places.

Use Steel Wool. Dear Madam—The light colored hardwood floors of a house I have had become very dirty.

Wants Kreiser's Address. Dear Madam—Would you please let me know how a letter could reach Fritz Kreiser.

Remove Ink Stains. Dear Madam—Will you tell me through the Exchange what will remove ink stains from a white skirt which has been stained by a polishing brush?

Has Various Opinions. Dear Cynthia—First I would like to say to "Two Disgusted Girls," a short time ago I felt just as you feel about my situation.

Remove Ink Stains. Dear Madam—Will you tell me through the Exchange what will remove ink stains from a white skirt which has been stained by a polishing brush?

WHAT'S WHAT

The college girl may be athletic or studious or social (the wise ones are all three), but in any case, her wardrobe should be provided with a sufficiency of outdoor apparel.

For outdoor seasons, the knitted fabric suits are most satisfactory. They will stand a great deal of hard wear without showing it.

THERE'S ALWAYS SOMEBODY TO ASK ONE MORE QUESTION

After You Have Told All You Know or Put All the Paths You Have Into a Story—And It's Always Something Unimportant

"WELL, what do you think?" exclaimed the daughter of the family, "I met Peggy Brown today, and all people, and she had a long talk."

"Why, the idea!" cried her mother, "What was she doing in town?"

"She's staying with her aunt for a few days, and then she's going—"

"What did she have on; how did she look?" interrupted a sister.

"She looked awfully well, and she had on a stunning dress of dark blue serge, with a silk scarf, and a dark red hat."

"Where'd you see her?" asked father.

"Down at the place where I went to get my scissors sharpened—"

"Where do you get your scissors sharpened?" her brother queried.

"What in the mischief was she doing there?"

"Oh, I don't know!"

"Isn't it funny that there's always somebody to ask that question that you don't know?"

And it's always a question that doesn't make any difference anyhow.

You describe a fearsome tramp who came to the dirty door begging for something to eat.

He carried the stick of a broken umbrella, and he had a scraggy beard, and no necktie and his shirt was filthy, and—

"What was he carrying the stick of a broken umbrella for?" somebody is sure to say.

And you stop, your train of thought all broken to pieces and then you say, disgustedly, "Oh, I don't know."

IF ONLY they would pick out something important, or, at least, something that you could possibly answer.

But they seem to search out the most noticeable thing in a narrative.

Some one tells a beautiful touching story about the sweet expression on a child's face as she gazed innocently up at a picture of the Madonna and child.

Her remark, one of those childish remarks that are so trusting, so sincere and so amusing, is repeated, and the hearers of the story give that laugh with a catch in it which that kind of story always calls forth.

BUT this one person clings to the picture of the little girl looking at the picture long after the laugh has subsided, and the catch has been controlled.

"Well, how did she happen to catch sight of the picture?" he wants to know stolidly.

"Oh," the narrator replies, brought down to soggy earth, "I don't know. Maybe somebody told her to."

Who cares, anyhow?

It's a very good thing to have a practical side to your mind sometimes, other times when it is much more pleasant for other people if you push it aside for a little while at least.

Two Minutes of Optimism

By HERMAN J. STICH

Lucky Victims

"The other day," said my friend, the chief, "I was leaving the office at the 'twilight hour' when I noticed parked at the curb, an automobile in which two men buried their armpits in packages of widely advertised, jitters."

"The low price would also attract people who mutilate some other variety, and they, too, would acquire the habit of punishing the proper brand. Of course, there is the inevitable slight loss in selling to people who have already signed themselves for that particular genus of crude rubber, but that is the loss suffered by all manufacturers who offer free samples to get new users."

"The psychology of the thing," continued the chief, "is that if you once get people into the habit of doing a certain thing, or doing it in a certain way, you can count on the force of habit to keep them from changing. The man who for a reasonable length of time has regularly used a certain make of toothpaste, shaving cream, hair tonic, cough syrup, dyspepsia tablet or whatnot, will just instinctively ask for his customary label as naturally as he asks for his favorite newspaper. This force of habit is sometimes so strong that many piano instructors charge double rates to teach pupils whose ways they have to undo."

"Habit can do wonders, and it is responsible for many of our millionaires not alone because they got other people into certain habits and made them pay for it, but because they themselves early in their careers got into the habit of acquiring the proper habits. We talk about character and personality and other qualities of a man, but in the final analysis they are all a matter of habit. Honesty, industry, thoroughness, fastidiousness, decency, self-confidence, aggressiveness, initiative, health—in fact everything about a man and his very fate are the result of habit which begins in strands and ends as chains."
