BILL TILDEN TOYS WITH NET RIVAL

World's Champion Wins Easily From Wesbrook in National Play

By SPICK HALL. West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 3.—The luck of the draw in the national tournament for the lawn tennis championship of the United States permitted Walter Wesbrook, of Detroit, to reach the fifth round. But that was all for the Middle West left-hander, as he struck Bill Tilden early this afternoon on No. 3 court. Tilden didn't even get warmed up before three sets had been called in his favor. The scores were 6-3, 8-4, 6-1.

Tilden began with service and won. He then reeled off four more games in a row for a 7-love lead, then became very careless and dropped three in succession before he annexed the final game and set at 6-3. Wesbrook was so far below Tilden's class that the champion refused to even run after his own shots, preferring to let the left-hander's point rather than make an extra effort.

Point score, first set: Tilden.....1 4 3 2 2 4 0 3—32-0 Wesbrook.....2 4 5 2 2 0 6 4 3—28-3 Tilden took the first game of the second set, then once more lapsed into a very lazy attitude. Wesbrook, by working himself almost to exhaustion, won four games for a 4-1 lead. Tilden never making an attempt to play tennis at all. Tilden won the next game, but after that he had been ousted twice in the seventh game Wesbrook took it, as Tilden carelessly drove far back of the base line twice. This gave the Detroit man a 2-2 lead.

Wesbrook had set point on Tilden twice in the next game on the champion's service, but could not win. Tilden also took the sixth game, driving up to 5-4. On his service he won once more and duced the set at 5-4. Wesbrook took the lead at 6-5, on his own delivery, taking the final point, but what had to be called a service ace, but what matter of fact Tilden could easily have returned it if he had made the attempt, which he did not do. Tilden quickly made it 6-6 by playing some regular tennis.

Point score, second set: Tilden.....1 1 0 3 4 4 7 4 4 3 4 5 4 8—48-8 Wesbrook.....2 4 4 5 1 6 5 0 2 2 2 2 2 2—43-6

Practice Match To those who believed that Vincent Richards really had a chance to beat Tilden yesterday's match must have been a cruel blow. For three sets Bill gave the spectators a nine-tenths of whom were metropolitan fans, a chance to indulge in all kinds of speculation. During this period of the match Tilden, for the fourth time in the series, gave fine exhibition of his many strokes. And it was that which lost him the second set.

Tim and again, the champion could have won a point by playing a shot differently, but he preferred to try something else with the result that he fell into numerous errors.

erts, the national clay court champion, began their match early in the afternoon. The odds were on Roberts. That was because those who decided to make wagers are simply sports, not tennis analysts. There were few persons present who know that Johnson was at the crest of his season's form. They believed he would win, and he didn't disappoint them.

It took five sets for the Philadelphia to get the decision, but he got it and, incidentally, played one of the finest matches of the tournament. For those who think that Johnson can play only a back-court game, his work yesterday was a revelation. It is known among those who followed Wallace's play that he is one of the quickest players on the court and that he is a wonderful volleyer. It is true that he doesn't do much volleying as a rule in singles because he does play in the back court most of the time. But against Roberts he varied his attack by frequent trips to the net, and when he got there he volleyed splendidly.

PENN TRIES OUT 3 FORWARD PASSES

New Aerial Formations Introduced—Heisman Pleased With Progress

George School, Newtown, Pa., Sept. 3.—Three new forward passes were introduced into the rehearsal today of the University of Pennsylvania football squad, which is here taking the country air and a lot of hard work in preparation for the opening of the season shortly at home.

Coch J. Heisman has picked a temporary backfield and it now looks as though it will be the one to start the opening game. Heisman has impressed on the men that he will play no favorites, caring nought what position a man has previously held, nor for his former reputation. He is picking the man he likes best for the position he believes will best suit his playing ability.

The backfield that ran through the formations on the "first" squad this afternoon follows: Rex Wray, quarter; Whitehill and Hiben, halfbacks, and Pass Miller, fullback. Forward passing featured this afternoon's quarters, with a lot of time given to different formations and the elementary parts of the game. There were two elevens on the field this afternoon and lots of candidates to fill in.

At last night's meeting, Heisman discussed considerably on the old Penn do-or-die spirit, and inspired the men with the necessity of living up to the ancient traditions of the Red and Blue warriors of gridiron history.

WASHINGTON WILL TAKE ON A'S Following Three Straight Wins by Mackmen

Washington is here today and Griff's Senators may expect no easy picking against the Athletics at the Shibe grounds this afternoon. The Mackmen are just after making one of their record-winning streaks of the season, three victories in a row against the Detroit Tigers.

In the presence of the touring English cricketers and other the Macks bowled over Cobb et al. yesterday by a 2-0 score. Slim Harris, the lean Texan, extracted all but two-base hits from the bats of the Michigan crew. He had everything but a vote for the next President at the coming election. He has not raised a beard long enough to qualify to cast his ballot.

Detroit base hits were isolated. One came in the fifth with one out. Incidentally, this blow was not of the healthy variety. It fell out of reach of Pitcher Bigbee, who was coveting the left field. The second and final swing was a good one from the bat of Stange to right field in the eighth session.

The pitching battle between Harris and Oldham was won in the very first round. The two runs manufactured by our men in the opening session proved to be the only scoring of the pastime. Both tallies were made during the port-side administration of Oldham, who toiled seven frames and then gave way to Pinch Hitter Hale.

LOCAL CRICKETERS MAKE POOR START

Philadelphia C. C. Eleven Scores 39 Runs for Two Wickets Against English Tourists

The best weather the English cricketers have experienced since their arrival here greeted the famed Incegnill eleven when they met the Philadelphia Cricket Club team at St. Martin's, today.

The tourists did not anticipate such an easy match as that against their first opponents, the Frankford eleven. However, the cricket club did not make a particularly auspicious start.

They scored 39 runs for two wickets, when Wilfred Graham was clean-bowled by Desmond Roberts. The local team won the toss and elected to bat first. A. G. Scattergood made the first stand and scored 31 runs, including six boundaries before he was bowled by Roberts and caught by M. B. Burrows. Cyril Woolley succeeded Scattergood and had scored 8 runs, not out. When Scattergood retired Woolley was joined by Graham, who was bowled out on the first ball.

Burrows and E. H. M. Cartwright were the first English bowlers today and they with R. St. L. Fowler, bowled maiden overs. More than half of the local side are members of the all-Philadelphia team which recently invaded Canada. In addition to this, they are anxious to avenge the more or less thorough-going defeat that the white-flannelled gentlemen of Toronto hung on them several weeks ago.

The Britishers will face, among other things, the bowling of Bill Fellows, one of the best medium pace artists in the city. They say he has a mean ball that the visitors will have a lot of trouble in busting for boundaries, sixes and other forms of English maltreatment.

The St. Martins team is one of the fastest fielding sides in these parts. They are all young players who have some old fashioned American baseball experience in handling the ball and whipping it about the field.

In fact, and to be real brief, like a telegram to San Francisco, the two-inning match that will be opened at 11 o'clock this morning looks like the real thing or a bit of all right, all depending on which side of the water you claim as your permanent residence.

and dipping them I wasted a frightful lot of energy, don't you know. All the Englishmen faced the pitchers with more or less success. They stripped off their coats and stood up to the plate in their suspenders or braces, or whatever the most refined name for those supports is.

Horrows and Major Cartwright laced out some clean hits and showed promise of developing into clean-up batters. The whole crowd of them slammed away with the best humor in the world and won the crowd with their sportmanlike and good-natured efforts.

The Britishers made some suggestions for the improvement of the national pastime and collected a few tips that may serve them well at their own game. They felt that for the good of the game the bats and the home plate should be enlarged. They thought it would take a bit of going to bowl them over the plate and that a little more circumference added to the bat would promote the batting averages.

The most interesting match of the morning in the Lansdowne invitation tournament at the Lansdowne playground today, was a first-round battle in the intermediate doubles.

In this match Clement Walters and Morton Stewart defeated Ernest Uhl, a brother of Miss Eleanor Uhl, the Olympic swimmer, and William Sagen-dorph, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5. Uhl and Sagen-dorph won the first set handsly and their rivals captured the second set with equal ease. The third set was a real battle. Walters and Sagen-dorph won three games in succession and their opponents tied it at 4-4 and again at 5-4. In the last game Walters and Sagen-dorph had set point three times and lost it each time. They came through the fourth time and won it.

Uhl's new play at times was sensational. The choice on both sides was undecided. Walters was not very effective in his back court game, but Stewart did fine work at the net. Both sides frequently drove the ball out of bounds. Summary:

INTERMEDIATE SINGLES Second Round: Edwin Mitchell defeated Ernest Uhl, 6-7, 8-6, 6-14. Third Round: Ellwood Altman defeated George Phillips, 6-2, 6-1.
