LITHUANIANS PARADE HERE

Protest Against Polish Invasion of Their Native Country Several thousand Lithuanians paraded

Several thousand Lithuanians paraded along Broad street and through South Philadelphia yesterday in a protest against Polish invasion of their native country. A feature of the demonstration was the appearance of an airplane that flew along the route of march and dropped explanatory circulars printed in English.

Washingon avenue and up Moyamensing tiful, high land.

Negotiations for the purchase of the tract have been under way for some time, and it is expected the contract will soon be signed.

At the close of the parade a massimple of the parade and the parade a massimple of the parade a massi same as the circular, were adopted. The circular read: 'Fifteen thousand Philadelphians of Lithuanian origin emphatically protest against Polish invasion of Lithuania. The Poles invaded Lithuania by crossling the demarcation line set by the Versailles conference, and thus provoked the Lithuanians and caused the present conflict between them and the
