The Tremendous Cost of the Late War Will Be Better

Understood by the sight of, riding at anchor in New York waters,

> Eight of the largest and finest superdreadnought destroyers technically known as battleships some of them apparently five hundred feet long, manned by a thousand men and fully equipped with guns and war apparatus of every description.

These big ships, are now greeting a Spanish warship by reciprocal salutations of national flags.

It is said that some of the ships we are looking at cost twenty millions of dollars.

Ascertain how many destroyers and submarines the United States Government has built and give Secretary of Navy Daniels credit instead of criticism for having done his best to put the United States in fighting trim against the world's enemy.

No matter what the cost, we could not afford to lose, whatever the cost might be.

Let us play the game fairly between man and man.
