Grandmother had gone to spend the day with Mother and Dickie, and while sitting in the living room happened to bear an altercation between Dickie and his wee friend, Jack. Jack it appeared, had a small gun, and several other toys which he had brought over to Dickie's yard. Dickie liked the gun, so did Jack, and what was more, it belonged to him so they fought. Grandmother appeared at the door and said: "Dickie, you must give Jack his gun, It belongs to him, you know."

One of Mrs. Edward Troth's dancing class will be held at the Germantown Cricket Club on Friday night, December 16. There will be six dances during the season. Mrs. Troth returned last week to her home, 2118 West Penn street, Germantown, after spending three months traveling abroad through Switzerland, England and France with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Woodbridge Riley, of Paughkeepsie, N. Y. gun, so did Jack, and what was more, it belonged to him so they fought. Grandmother appeared at the door and said: "Dickie, you must give Jack his gun. It belongs to him, you know." Dickie looked hard at his grandmother, then he looked at Jack. And then holding his small hand with the gun in it, behind his back, he stooped over and plcking up Jack's little horse, held it out to him, while in a wheedling tone he remarked, "Here's your gun, Jackie."

object that has a novel idea is weicemed rapturously. Me, I wouldn't miss this affair, I tell you.

DENEFIT affairs make me think of Mrs. Norman Jackson. Why?
Well just because she is such an energelic worker in things in which she is interested, and, too. I happened to see her yesterday walking on Chestnut street with the cutest white dog on his leash. Mrs. Jackson was wearing a wery good-looking frock of black chims alk, dotted in white. An overskirt of black chiffon edged with a wide hem of the dotted material was an effective part of the gown. The bodice was made on plain lines finished with a narrow white collar. Her hat was of plain black raffin in a large sailor shape. She
