SEARCH CONTINUED IN RIVER FOR TRACE OF COUGHLIN BABY

Grief-Stricken Parents Glad Long Suspense Over Fate of Infant Is Past

PASQUALE WILL BE TRIED IN MONTGOMERY COUNTY

Police Investigate "Crank's" Stories of Two Other Killings Committed in Philadelphia

"Crank" Can't Be Lying Now Declares Major Adams

"Bank? No such thing," said Major Adams, of the state police, today, when told many persons in Norristown said, "The Crank's" story was a "take."

"Pasquale told me he had thrown the baby's body into the river at a certain point. At 5 o'clock yesterday morning he took Captain Gearhart there and showed him the place. "Pasquale said he had tied a piece of iron to the baby's leg. We saw a diver down and he got the iron and string. This is more than coincidence."

"It is true we didn't get the body, and may not get it. Though we fail in this, yet I feel we have done all that was humanly possible. During this time the body of a baby would have disintegrated probably."

"I believe Pasquale, much as he has lied to me in the past," he told me this story with a wealth of circumstance that could not possibly have been imagined."

State police today continued search for the body of Blakely Coughlin, which August Pasquale says he threw into the Schuylkill river near Ivy Rock, even though medical experts at the University of Pennsylvania say that the disintegrating influence of the water would have carried away all trace of the little form long ago.

Major Lynn G. Adams, head of the state police, today reiterated his belief in the truthfulness of the Crank's story about the abduction, death and disposal of the body of the thirteen-month-old son of George H. Coughlin, of Norristown. The baby was stolen from his crib by Mrs. McFadden, of Norristown, the baby's father, although saddened by the knowledge that he never would see his little one again, yet expressing confidence at the time of the hanging suspense, a gladness, he said, in which his wife shared.

"Crank's" Trial Next Month

Pasquale, according to the district attorney of Montgomery county, will be tried at the November term of court in Norristown.

Assistant District Attorney Hendricks, of Montgomery county, said today the self-confessed kidnapper and murderer would not be turned over to the Philadelphia authorities for trial.

"I will take care of him here," said Mr. Hendricks.

The Philadelphia police are investigating the stories of two murders, which Pasquale has confessed, as having been committed in this city.

The first of these was the murder of Mrs. Rose Asherman, an aged woman who kept a lodging house at 908 North Eighth street. She was killed twenty-four hours before the Coughlin baby was murdered.

The second murder to which Pasquale confessed was that of Edward Ryan, forty-five years old, who lived in a cedar-alive near Eighth and Green streets. He was in the saloon when an arm was thrust through the door and a shot fired. He fell with a fatal wound. Before he died he said he knew who had shot him, but would not tell. Pasquale has taken this crime on himself also.

Mr. Coughlin today described the trip in the early morning of yesterday to the banks of the river at a point between the Trenton cut-off of the Pennsylvania Railroad and the mill bridge between Swedeland and Ivy Rock, in search of the baby's body.

"We had a consultation about it," said Mr. Coughlin. "Major Hendricks, Major Adams, Captain Gearhart and I made the matter over after Pasquale made his confession."

"We decided to let him to the test. He had told his story in great detail, and seemed anxious to lead us to the place where he had thrown the little body into the river. I have been the first time he had acted as if he were not lying. As we went along the child had died under his coat, that he had not meant to kill it."

"I kept on insisting that the child's death was an accident. At last he came to a spot where he recognized the place where he had picked up the body of iron which he tied to the baby to lead him down. Then he showed us where side of the river, and said that the body in it. We marked the spot, and Norristown was taken back to jail at the same time."

Mr. Coughlin said that he had experienced a "great feeling of relief" to know the worst at last.

"I loved our baby dearly, and it said, "But our heartbreak, and we extended over many months, and there is a natural feeling of relief now that the suspense is ended."

To Cherish Memory of Baby

"I am afraid the little body will not be recovered. Perhaps it is as well. The memory that wife and I will carry to the end of our lives will be the happy memory of a beautiful little baby who was born in the same thought to me. She said this morning, "I think it is terrible to know that"

READY FOR THE NEXT INTRUDERS

SERVANTS QUIZZED IN JEWEL ROBBERY

Detectives Detain Fourteen at McFadden Residence in Quest for $300,000 in Gems

$25,000 REWARD OFFERED

Fourteen servants at Bloomfield, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. George H. McFadden, Jr., near Villanova, were being detained at the residence today and closely questioned concerning the disappearance of Mrs. McFadden's jewelry, valued at more than $300,000.

Detectives are virtually convinced that the "bouidoir theft" of the famous McFadden pearl necklace and other gems was an inside job, or was committed with the aid of some one in or familiar with the McFadden residence. Mr. McFadden has refused to fasten suspicion on any one of the servants, although he would not absolve them in connection with the mysterious disappearance of the gems.

The jewels were missed by Mrs. McFadden at 9 o'clock last Saturday morning.

She had worn the jewels at a dinner at Bloomfield the night before. Servants saw the rare rope of pearls and other jewels when Mrs. McFadden wore them at the dinner.

It is also likely that they knew she placed them in a jewel case on her dressing table on retiring at midnight Friday, instead of locking them in a safe, which was her custom.

There is a theory that the jewels may have been taken between 9 and 9 o'clock on Saturday morning. Mrs. McFadden left her boudoir at that time and breakfasted in an adjoining room.

The jewels lay unguarded in the next room for at least an hour until Mrs. McFadden suddenly remembered she had not placed them in a safe and hurried in only to learn they were gone.

Three insurance companies have jointly offered a reward of $25,000 for recovery of the jewels.

It is now estimated one missing string of pearls is worth from $150,000 to $200,000.

W. E. Miller, of 400 Walnut street, representing the three companies that insured the string of pearls, said it consists of 135 pearls, weighing 1,340 carats, or 335 carats. He said the pearl rope might have been worth only $150,000 at the time it was bought ten years ago, but it had since doubled in value.

Other jewelers said the McFadden necklace was known to the trade as one of the finest in the United States.

There is also a theory that the necklace, consisting of sixty-five pearls, was stolen, with diamond and onyx earrings, set in platinum; a wrist watch, a diamond bracelet, a platinum diamond bracelet; a platinum ring, with a diamond sapphire, and an imitation pearl necklace, which is a replica of the pearl rope.

No trace has been found of the jewels stolen on the night of October 5 from the home of Mrs. William Sackett, Duell, in Meadowbrook, Pa. They are valued at $25,000.

HOLD-UP MEN BEAT AND ROB VICTIM OF $105; POLICE NEAR WILMINGTON, DEL.

Man Is Assaulted Within Block of Winter St. Station

Ernest P. Bowden, of Wilmington, Del., was held up by two masked men near Tenth and Wood streets last night, knocked unconscious and robbed of $105.

The hold-up took place a block from the Tenth and Wood streets station. Bowden had been visiting in the vicinity and was walking down Tenth street. At Wood street he was confronted by two men who stepped from the shadows of a building.

The men pointed revolvers at Bowden and ordered him to hold up his hands. He refused to comply with their demand and lunged a blow at one of the armed men.

The other robber then drew a black-jack and struck Bowden on the head. The man crumpled and fell unconscious. The other man then searched his pockets and obtained a wallet containing the $105.

Pedestrians discovered the unconscious man, who was taken to the Habermann Hospital, where it is believed his injuries are confined to bruises and cuts of the scalp. His condition is not serious.

C. M. ALEXANDER, EVANGELIST, DIES

Singer Remembered Here for Revival Meetings Conducted With Torrey in 1905

SUCCUMBS IN ENGLAND

Charles McCallon Alexander, the evangelist, died suddenly today at his home in Birmingham, England.

Known throughout the world as the "singing evangelist," Mr. Alexander kept up his work until 1918, when he retired to his English estate, following his war work in the camps as head of the Pocket Testament League. He was born October 24, 1867, at Maryland, Penn. and was in life started his evangelistic work his greatest success being in the organization and training of great singing choirs.

He is best known to Philadelphia through the Torrey-Alexander revival meetings in the Second Regiment Armory at Broad and Diamond streets in 1906. This was one of the first large-scale revivals, being patterned upon those of Moody and Sankey, and being carried to their climax later by the Rev. William A. Sunday. He was a lifelong friend of Billy Sunday's, having met him in 1893, and ever afterward having taken a deep interest in the progress of his revival work.

Mr. Alexander was the author of many hymns, the most popular of which was "Glory for Me." He made a tour of the world with Dr. Torrey from 1902 to 1906, and during 1909 and 1907 made another tour of the world with his wife.

During this second trip he was thrown from his horse in China, and for a time it was feared his injuries would result in his death. He later fully recovered.

His wife was Miss Helen Cadbury, wife of the English millionaire chocolate manufacturer.

FIGHT OVER LEAGUE IS BEING NARROWED DOWN TO ARTICLE X

Cox, Unable to Pioneer, Is Gradually Driven Toward Wilson's Position

PARTIES SPLIT ON ISSUE OF SENDING TROOPS ABROAD

Country in General Is Believed to Favor Harding's Policy of Noninterference

By CLINTON W. GILBERT
Staff Correspondent Evening Public Ledger, Copyright, 1920, by Public Ledger Co., Columbus, O., Oct. 13.—The League of Nations issue, which has come to the front in the last few days of this campaign, is turning more and more on Article X.

Governor Cox, since he has given up trying to raise other issues, has come, more and more, to the Wilson position on the league. His questions addressed in St. Louis to Ex-President Taft, by implication, commit him to Article X.

And Senator Harding, on his recent trip in the West, emphasized the super-government and the obligation, legal or moral, to defend the territorial integrity of foreign powers which the league covenant creates, as his objection to entering the league, that is to say, his great objection is Article X. The association of nations which he will seek to create, whether it be a remodeled League of Nations, or a new organization, will be bound by no Article X.

Harding Opposes Article X
This turn in the debate brings the two parties very near the positions which they occupied during the fight between President Wilson and the United States Senate. Senator Harding is not expressly for the League reservation, he does not yet see the bitter opposition or support which he has in the Republican party.

Senator Harding would probably say, if he chose to discuss these reservations, that he was no longer for them, because, in the light of events in Europe, and a fuller understanding of the whole situation, better means than the League reservation could be found for safeguarding the interests of the United States.

But Senator Harding's real aim, as set forth in his address to the press, is to effect an association of nations, the league, or something else, and accomplish what the League reservations would not entirely succeed in accomplishing.

In particular, Senator Harding would get rid of Article X. The big issue between him and Governor Cox is Article X, which is the only reservation in the Senate. Mr. Harding is not far from the position of his party during the great controversy of last winter.

Article X is Shillballeh
The rock on which the United States Senate and President Wilson split was Article X. It did not emerge clear and free until after the election of November, and it was the issue in Washington. It was the point on which there was no compromise possible, and Article X is the great plank that divides the two parties today.

Harding is for a league or association which shall be bound by no Article X, and Harding, over and over again, is inflexible, at least, defends Article X.

The emergency of Article X as an issue probably helps the Republican cause. The one thing that appears in the reaction of the League reservation of both Harding and Cox is that the country does not wish to be bound to interfere by force of arms in European quarrels.

LEAVING HOSPITAL COSTS BOY'S LIFE

Little Motortruck Victim Dies When Father Insists on Taking Him Home

SECOND CHILD ALSO KILLED

Two three-year-old boys died as the result of traffic accidents last night, one in his home after his father had taken him from the hospital in the face of warnings of fatal results to doctors.

The boy who died in his home was Bernard Weinstein, Jr., 2431 North Stanley street. He and his mother were struck as they alighted from a Market street trolley car late in the afternoon.

They were taken to the Jefferson Hospital. About 10 o'clock last night the father and husband visited the place and told the physicians he wanted to take his family home.

They told him it was all right to move Mrs. Weinstein, who suffered only cuts, bruises and shock, but said any attempt to move the boy probably would result in his death.

Doctors Yield
The father, however, insisted on taking both home, saying he thought they would get better treatment there. The doctors were forced to yield to his wishes and the Weinstein were discharged.

A little Bernard was dead when Dr. A. Bernstein, the family physician, reached the Weinstein home in answer to a telephone call.

Barney Branklin, 800 Christian street, the driver of the truck, will be arrested in City Hall tonight.

The other boy killed was Frank Murray, 3104 North Twenty-sixth street. He was struck by a motortruck at Twenty-eighth and Oxford streets last night, when he stepped into the path of another motortruck.

Driver Held for Coroner
The body was taken to the Samaritan Hospital and then sent home. George Krebs, 2422 North Marsden street, the driver, was held without bail to await the action of the coroner who arraigned today before Magistrate Price.

Jumping from the rear of a motortruck on which, police say, he had been stealing a ride, a 1406 North Twenty-seventh street, was seriously injured at Twenty-eighth and Oxford streets last night, when he stepped into the path of another motortruck.

CHINESE REPUBLIC FALLS, IS REPORT

Monarchy Proclaimed in Peking, Says Dispatch From Shanghai

EMPIRE MAY BE RESTORED

Shanghai, Oct. 13.—(General Chang Tsoo-Lin, governor of Feng-Tien, has overthrown the Peking government and proclaimed a monarchy, according to a rumor current in this city. This report has not been authenticated, and no details have been received here, but Chinese officials have been profoundly stirred by it.

General Chang Tsoo-Lin was probably the strongest military leader during the recent conflict between the Chih-li and Anfu parties. He played a leading part during that trouble and was accused of being a tool of the Japanese. It is the supposition here that the coup if it really has taken place, is an effort to restore to the throne former Emperor Hsuan Tung, son of Prince Chun.

General Lishun, commander of Chinese Government troops in the provinces of Kiangsu and Kiangsi and leader of a powerful political clique, committed suicide at Nanking yesterday by shooting himself. The text of his will declared his action was due to developments at Peking and the failure of measures he had advocated for the salvation of the nation.

Half of the general's fortune of many millions of yen was left to carry on the work of famine relief and education. His death, it is believed, will have far-reaching political results.

In connection with the lack of identification of the Shanghai rumor of the Peking overturn, it may be noted that last night a message was received from the Associated Press correspondent in Peking, dated October 12, which mentioned a hint of any governmental complications.

The president of the Chinese republic is Hsu Shih-Chang, who was elected in August, 1918, and inaugurated in October last. His cabinet was organized August 11 of this year, is headed by General Chin Yun-Peng as premier and minister of war.

SOCIALISTS DECLARE AGAINST REVOLUTION

Italian Moderates Say Revolt Would Fail Unless Aid Was Received

Regio Nello-Sitt, Feb. 12.—(By A. P.)—(For editorial comment.)—The Socialists of the International P. R. T. Co. would be a transitory necessity imposed by special conditions, but is not the constitutionally of the Socialist party of Italy, in connection with the conference of Moderate Socialists today.

The resolutions did not condemn the use of violence or forceful means in class struggles, but said these means should be adopted "only in the last step against the blind reaction of the bourgeoisie, and have for their object the breaking up of social organizations incompatible with new economic progress and new methods of production."

The resolutions say the war hastened the crisis faced by capitalist regimes, which is being hastened by the downfall of the imperial Russian empire. They declare the treaty of Versailles sanctions weaker capitalist governments. A violent and destructive revolution is urged, according to communist Russian ideas, the resolutions declare, would soon collapse unless helped economically and politically by the proletariat of richer countries.

In conclusion, the resolutions reaffirmed that if occasion arises the Italian Socialist party "will not renounce the conquest of political power in any way which the opportunity of the moment and the international situation suggest."

Working on Sand Now
The Superior Court may decide this on very narrow grounds. If it does go into the question deeply its decision will do no good. The Public Service Commission ought to make it condition that the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. itself should institute proper proceedings regarding this rental question.

If these rents cannot be reduced that will be the end of that phase of the matter and we will know in what direction we are going. At present we are working on nothing but a foundation of sand, so let us go into the rental question and have it thrashed out so we can have a foundation of rock."

Mr. Gaffney, after explaining how he has been handling the matter, said the complaint against the underlying companies, went into question whether the rentals could be reduced.

"Why should not the underlying companies pay their fair share of the cost?" he asked. "Why should all fall on the car?" he asked. "Why should the underlying company bear a part of the burden?"

Opposes 5-Cent Fare
Mr. Gaffney turned to the five-cent fare plan, remarking that so far as that matter was concerned, he was opposed to it.

"We have built up in our section 292 free transfer points as against sixty-eight in West Philadelphia," he asserted. "The councilman in my district are opposed to the abolition of free transfers."

He then sat down without offering any suggestions regarding what fare should be charged. He arose when Commissioner Clement asked: "Mr. Gaffney, can you enlighten us as to what should be done?"

"The councilman's reply was that he saw no reason why the five-cent fare should be charged," he said.

W. L. George Blames Men for Italian Shipwrecks
Washington, Oct. 13.—Husbands are responsible for all the trouble in married life, according to W. L. George, well-known English novelist, now making a tour of America. Mr. George, the author of "Calliban," gives the following advice to men:

"Don't be too truthful to your wife; it is better to lie a little than to be unhappy."

"Too many men allow happy courtships to grow into dull marriages."

"Once he is married a man first neglects his clothes, then his manners, and finally his attention to his wife."

"Only the husband who finds something to keep his wife's mind occupied every evening can hope to be happy."

"Women are more interested in mentally than men."

CLEMENT ASKS CITY TO FIGHT P. R. T. RENTALS

Commissioner Approves Gaffney's Suggestion City Solicitor Go Into Court

COUNCILMAN WANTS RULING BEFORE CHANGING FARES

First District Man Would Join Business Men's Move on Underlying Companies

FIVE-CENT RATE ATTACKED

Downtown and West Philadelphia Representatives Oppose President Mitten's Plan

The city was advised today to join in the proceedings to reduce the rentals paid underlying companies by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. The suggestion was made by Public Service Commissioner Clement.

Mr. Clement, who, with Commissioner Benn, sat in the Council chamber in City Hall to hear suggestions from members of Council, made this remark during an address by Councilman Gaffney, of the First district.

Mr. Gaffney had declared that without a final ruling on the underlying rental problem the whole fare question now rested on a foundation of sand. With the underlying rental question once disposed of, he declared, all parties would have a foundation of rock to work upon.

The hearing today was arranged by the Public Service Commission, which is considering the P. R. T. Co.'s plea for a slight increase in fare without exchange or free transfers.

Opportunity was offered councilmen to voice their views because of a resolution passed by Council last Saturday.

Councilman Gaffney, the first speaker, who was introduced by Richard Weglein, president of Council, said he and his fellow members from the First district were opposed to the straight five-cent plan.

Councilman Devellin, another speaker, brought forward his proposal of a slight fare, a plan he advocated in Council.

When the hearing opened Commissioner Clement outlined its object and referred to the proceedings now before the Superior Court. The underlying companies have questioned the authority of the Public Service Commission to pass on the rentals paid by the P. R. T. Co.

Question for Court
If the Superior Court decides that the commission is without jurisdiction that is the end of us in the matter," he said. "If the Superior Court should hold otherwise we would direct a hearing on the underlying rental question."

Following his formal introduction to the commission, Mr. Gaffney, Councilman Clement and Gaffney took the floor.

Wanted City to Intervene
"I will first discuss the underlying rental question," Mr. Gaffney said. "I wish to call your attention to the fact that on July 1 I introduced a resolution which provided that Council and the Mayor be directed to intervene in behalf of the city in the proceedings in the petition of the United Business Men's Association and the Cleveland Improvement Association, which had urged investigation and regulation of the rentals paid underlying companies by the P. R. T. Co."

The resolution was voted down by administration members of Council. I would be glad to reintroduce this resolution at this time. My suggestion should be acted on," he continued, addressing Commissioner Clement. "and that Council should adopt a resolution directing the city solicitor to intervene."

Referring to the action before the Superior Court on the underlying rental question, Mr. Gaffney said:

"It depends on how the question is raised before the court. This question will do no good. The Public Service Commission ought to make it condition that the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. itself should institute proper proceedings regarding this rental question."

If these rents cannot be reduced that will be the end of that phase of the matter and we will know in what direction we are going. At present we are working on nothing but a foundation of sand, so let us go into the rental question and have it thrashed out so we can have a foundation of rock."
