She must have leaned against the rail of the porch at her Germantown home to rest a moment and when it gave way suddenly, lost her balance and could not save herself. Every one feels so much for Mr. Williams. It's hard enough to lose one so near, but to have it happen in that dreadful way and to be the one to find her, must have been a most horrible shock for him. Mrs. Williams was a charming woman and a most devoted mother. She leaves a son, Francis Churchill Williams, Jr., who is a student at the Chestnut Hill Academy.
