

LORIMER ASSAILS COX AS UNETHICAL

Saturday Evening Post Editor Pillories Democratic Candidate for Attack

SEES CONFIDENCE BROKEN

Governor Cox's attack on the Saturday Evening Post because of its endorsement of the candidacy of Senator Harding in its next issue is the best possible proof that he should not become President.

That is the attitude taken by George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Post, who says Governor Cox violated a confidence, of which he was aware, when he told the contents of the issue before it was offered for public sale.

Mr. Lorimer's Statement
In a statement made public today, Mr. Lorimer said:

"There could be no better vindication of the cartoon and comment that will appear in this week's number of the Saturday Evening Post, no clearer demonstration of Governor Cox's unpartisan attitude, than his misleading remarks on the advance copy of the weekly that has come into his possession."

"Governor Cox is a millionaire newspaper editor and publisher of long experience. He must, therefore, understand that it is a first point of honor among newspapermen not to make use of advance copies of publications that ave sent out with the understanding that they will not be released until a fixed date in the future. He must know, as a publisher, that at the postal rate now being charged periodicals and newspapers, no question of a subsidy by the government is involved; that the periodicals are not only paying their way, but that under any kind of an efficient administration in the postoffice there is a handsome profit in carrying them. Though the editor of the Saturday Evening Post has had something to say editorially on other sections of the revenue bill, he has accepted and consistently refrained from attacking the raise in postal rates, even though he believed it unjust. If Governor Cox has studied the advertising columns of the Saturday Evening Post with the intelligence and knowledge that a man in his position should have, he must know that it has been the policy of that magazine to refuse casual advertising, growing out of the excess-profit tax, and has insisted on well-considered, well-formulated campaigns behind commodities that can use advertising profitably and economically.

Formulates Post Policy
"The policy of the Saturday Evening Post is now, and always has been, formulated by its editor. Neither any politician or group of politicians, nor any interest of any kind or description, have suggested what stand it should take in this election, or had anything whatsoever to do with influencing its policy. The cartoons to which Governor Cox takes exception were ordered by the editor from the cartoonist of the Saturday Evening Post, Mr. Herbert Johnson, and the editorial in the same number was planned and written by the editor. Both grew out of a sincere conviction on his part that the United States cannot stand up under another four years of Democratic rule. Given the same record and the Republican party in power, he would not hesitate to take a strong position against a continuance of Republican rule.

"Propaganda has come, in the minds of shallow thinkers like Governor Cox, to mean any view that does not square with theirs. Neither Governor Cox nor any other Democrat found anything savoring of 'disloyal propaganda' in the Saturday Evening Post's consistent and unwavering stand behind the President during the years of the great war. Nor did they take exception on the grounds of partisanship to its editorials against changing the administration while the great war was in progress. Nor did Governor Cox cry-baby over the pleasant sketch of him that was written by Mr. Blythe for the weekly, nor over the opportunity which we gave him to express his views fully and without reservation in our columns. There is much to be said in favor of an altruist for President. There is nothing to be said in favor of putting a yellow journalist in the White House.

CHILDREN WIN SUIT

Upheld in Refusal to Waive Insurance for Stepmother
Judge Shoemaker today filed an opinion in Court No. 1, dismissing the suit of Robert Bell, a policeman, who had a dispute with the Police Beneficiary Association and his children regarding the beneficiaries under a certificate issued to him by the association. The beneficiaries named in the certificate were the former Mrs. Bell, now dead, and their four children. After Bell remarried he demanded that the association change the certificate naming his present wife alone as beneficiary, and he asked that the children deliver up the old certificate.

The association was willing to issue a new certificate naming both the present Mrs. Bell and the four children beneficiaries, but refused to name her sole beneficiary, unless the children consented to the change. This they refused to do.

LEGAL MUFFLER ON NOISE
Judge Shoemaker today issued an injunction stopping the electric shoe repairing machinery in the shop of Maris Snyder, 213 West Ontario street, after 3 p. m. and before 7 a. m. weekdays and all day Sundays. Judge Shoemaker acted on a bill of complaint filed by Robert A. and Lottie V. Scott, who live next door to the Abbler, and who complained that the operation of the machine late in the evening and sometimes on Sunday racked their nerves.
