ASKS WOMEN TO ORGANIZE TO KEEP MEN FROM WAR

British Feminist, Now in Washington, Says 15,000 Austrians Were Executed Because They Refused to Fight

Washington, Oct. 27.—Males who cherish the belief that they are the protectors of womanhood did not get their ideas on that subject from Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, English feminist, now here with some entirely different theories and a peacock-blue afternoon gown.

MRS. PETHICK LAWRENCE

During a lecture at the headquarters of the National Women's party in Jackson place, facing historic Lafayette Square, it was a debatable question whether the gown of the talk held greater interest for the 300 women who attended.

"All our lives we have been told men were the protectors of women," Mrs. Lawrence said. "Well, perhaps they are. They are, to some extent at least, but there is one sense in which men cannot protect themselves and in which women must protect them, if civilization is to be saved.

is no other alternative under our present system. Right there is where women, now that they have the vote, can step in and protect them.

"We have outgrown the provincialism and many of the ideas we cherished before the world war. We have found, for example, that a mother is a mother everywhere.

"There is another war after the war, of which you have, perhaps, heard little—it is the war of disease and death on women and children in Europe.

"Yet even now we hear talk of the largest old book store in America. The text-books you are through with and sell to us, will be passed on to others, thus materially reducing your and their book expense.

next war, of bombs that will spread disease and death among whole populations, of explosives that will not only destroy human life, but destroy vegetation over great areas.

"The hope of peace rests with the women of the world and with the workers. When the women refuse to support wars and the orators lay down their tools wars will end and the nations will dwell in peace.

Mrs. Lawrence declared Great Britain, although "by far the most prosperous of the European nations which went through the war," is unable to pay her war debt.

Members of the National Women's party demonstrated the knowledge of practical politics after the lecture by taking up a collection among the guests. But the tea was excellent.

WANT GIFTS FOR CHILDREN Society for Their Protection Appeals for Books and Toys

The Society for Protect Children from Cruelty has appealed for books, toys or games suitable for children—boys or girls—under sixteen years of age.

"The society has recently taken over the management of the Temporary Home, formerly known as the Joint Shelter, and wishes to provide better recreation for the children who have to spend several days in the home.

Any citizens who have such books or playthings to contribute may leave them at the office of the society or send a postcard notice.

CIVIC CLUB BOOSTS MOORE Passes Resolutions Praising Work of Mayor

The Civic Club, at a meeting held yesterday afternoon, at 1300 Spruce street, adopted a strong resolution in favor of Mayor Moore and his administration.

No allusion was made to the mass-meeting in the Arch Street Methodist Church, Monday night, at which Mayor Moore was assailed for his position on Sabbath observance.

When Fitch's Steamboat stopped

John Fitch, a clockmaker and silversmith of Philadelphia, invented a steamboat which made a trip from Kensington to Burlington. On the way back, however, the machinery went wrong and the boat stopped forever, much to the chagrin of the inventor and the worthy citizens who had invested their savings in the new enterprise.

There are many ventures that absorb through failure the savings of unfortunate investors, but there is one that cannot fail and that is a SAVING FUND that is conducted wisely and conservatively. Investigate our Saving Fund plan.

THE GENIUS OF WALTHAM THE war is over. But there are some of us who will never forget. They, also, who go down to the sea in ships, have long memories. Let us keep them company and take a "sight" through the periscope of Time. Darkness! The kind of darkness that you feel. In the midst of the Stygian gloom, a little ship, one of Uncle Sam's destroyers. On guard! Somewhere off the coast of France. "Somewhere" is a good word for a night like this. Add to the black murk a cutting wind with an icy edge to it, a glare of angry waters, and you get a mixture you wouldn't like to prescribe for any man's comfort. But war is only another name for duty. That's why this little destroyer is smashing into the thick of it. And doing a good job, too. And somewhere aboard that throbbing, panting, leaping ship is a clock. "The ship's chronometer," the navigating officer calls it. But to gob and officer alike it is a symbol of home. For right there across its shining face is a familiar name—Waltham—a name that is as much a token of Uncle Sam being on the job night and day as the good ship under them. But that's the other part of our story— Time, in navigation, is as important as the sun and the stars. A reliable chronometer can always be seen in the Chart Room, but the sun does not always shine in the heavens. Small wonder, then, that the chief officer of a ship is so finicky over this timepiece. He guards it, he watches it, he prizes it, above all his possessions. It reckons for him the sea-miles when he has no other reckoning. It is the one friend he can depend upon when the elements league their cyclonic powers of wind and fog and storm against him. NOW the history of the chronometer is more or less a fanciful record of European supremacy. This tradition of the sea had it that the only reliable chronometer was one made either in England or on the continent. But many a tradition has been scrapped by necessity, and this is one of them. And any sailor-man will tell you that tradition in the Navy is as hard to overcome as a United States battleship stripped for action. But wait— When war was declared there were not enough foreign chronometers to go around. Here was the American craftsman's chance, for which he had been waiting a long, long time. The Navy Department, in the vernacular, was up against it. "Chronometers! Oh, for some chronometers!" was the cry. So the Waltham Watch Company was called upon. "Can you supply the Navy with chronometers?" "Certainly! How many?" The order was given and with Yankee dispatch promptly filled. Indeed, Waltham eventually supplied more chronometers during the war than all other makes combined. Then it was that the Waltham Chronometer went to sea and shattered forever the cherished tradition of foreign chronometer supremacy by standing up under conditions of war that often put the alien chronometer out of business. And they stood up so consistently that prejudiced old salts in verbal and written praise saluted the performances of this American Keeper of Time upon the Sea. FOR instance—imagine an instrument keeping the closest time in a subchaser, head on in a stormy sea. Every unit of the little ship shaking like a leaf. Straining, twisting, being buffeted, beaten. Now, hurled to the crest of a giant wave; anon, plunging like a stricken bird into a yawning pit of swirling water; sometimes lifted bodily, then crashed down like a toy thrown from the hand of a giant—and every moment that delicately adjusted but sturdy Waltham Chronometer ticking the fleeting seconds, unconcerned except with the business of keeping time—correct time, for the gallant lads who put their trust in this Watch Over Time while they keep their watch above or below deck. This was the acid test. But when we stop to think of it, Waltham had been preparing for over seventy years for our country's emergency—because of Waltham invention in watch making, because of advancement unto advancement in the art of developing time-keeping mechanisms, and those miracle-working machines that cannot be found or duplicated elsewhere in all the world, giving America precedence in this important industry. This, we believe, was true preparedness; this was Waltham's pride and honor, in vindicating the sines and ability of American industry in war's fiery challenge, as no less the Waltham Watch has sustained American supremacy at the great Expositions in times of peace. WE should be remiss if we forgot the mighty dead—those sons of genius who labored long years in Waltham laboratories for the glory of America.—Charles Van de Woerd, Duane H. Church, Charles Whitney, John Logan and others. "They rest from their labors, but their works do follow them." And no less those master American mechanics, Marsh and Ohlson (the inventor of the Waltham Time Fuse), who are still adding lustre to the fame of the American Waltham Watch all over the world. As Americans we should have long memories. It is inspiring to review the past. We have much to elate us, to help us "carry on," to produce more and still more, to supply the world with the work of our brains and hands. For in labor, well and cheerfully done, is our health, wealth and happiness. WALTHAM THE WORLD'S WATCH OVER TIME There is a beautiful Booklet for you—telling how the Waltham Watch is made.
