

HARDING 'ELECTED' BY PENN STUDENTS

Bryn Mawr Girls Also Give Republican Majority Over Cox

DEBS IS THIRD WITH 42

Harding should win next Tuesday if the straw vote cast by University of Pennsylvania and Bryn Mawr students yesterday is any harbinger.

The University of the Republic candidate was the overwhelming favorite, receiving 2235 votes. Governor Cox, Democratic candidate, received 655 votes. The remaining ballots, out of a total of 2750, were scattered among Christensen, the Farm-Labor party candidate, who received 12; Eugene V. Debs, Prohibition candidate, 12; and the twelve Prohibition votes were cast in the medical school. It was reported that the voters are looking forward to an active career in writing prescriptions after their graduation and therefore are in favor of the continuance of prohibition.

The vote helped in the Harding "handicap" by giving the majority of their votes to the senator. The faculty vote was close, thirty-one for Harding and nine for Cox.

Among other universities in which straw votes have been held in Princeton, where Harding also was the victor. In a vote at Bryn Mawr Cox ran a close second to Harding, receiving 178 votes against 214 for the latter, and in the vote at the University of Delaware, where the usual large Republican majority in this state will be impaired by the Democratic candidate next Tuesday.

Members of the faculty of the college favored Cox, giving him 24 votes as against 14 for Harding. The students voted 200 for Harding and 154 for Cox, a majority of only 38 for the Republican standard bearer in contrast with huge Republican majorities polled in former presidential campaigns.

PENN SOPHOMORES SMOKE BUT PRESIDENT IS ABSENT

Class Leader Arrives at 1 A. M. After Being Kidnapped and Held Prisoner by Freshmen—First Year Men Ducked

The sophomores of the University of Pennsylvania had their much anticipated smokes last night, but their president was not able to partake of the prizes and cigars. As a direct result of his absence numerous freshmen drank deep of the famous "Frog Pond" during the "Wee Sma' Hours."

Seldom, if ever, has the University campus been the scene of so hectic a struggle as that which waged during the early evening and broke out afresh when Paul Burton Hartenstein, the missing president, arrived at 1 o'clock in Broad Street Station from New York, where he had spent the day in close captivity.

Hartenstein was captured by a roving band of freshmen on Monday, was concealed at various times in three small Philadelphia hotels and finally was spirited out of town late Tuesday afternoon, despite a rigid sophomore guard at all stations.

It was through a third degree on some of these unfortunate that the sophomores learned where their president had been and when he would get home. Hence the welcome party at the station. Hence, also, continued duckings until nearly morning, when both parties were forced to desist from total exhaustion.

Only a dozen or so broken windows in Houston Club and a general appearance of desolated Belgium remained to tell the story.

Tries to Escape

Despite an injury to his leg, which he received in the tussle attending his capture, the "Soph" president made three attempts to escape, one from the bathroom of a downtown hotel here; one while his captors took him across the ferry to New York; and one, finally, from the uptown apartment of Herbert Nigham, the freshman president, in New York.

The sophomores even suspected his whereabouts and called the apartment by long-distance phone, but were told by a maid that she had not seen Mr. Nigham, and that there was no one in the apartment. Handcuffed until last evening, he was finally brought to Philadelphia on the midnight train by one of his captors, who received an unexpectedly rousing welcome from faithful sophomores when the train arrived at Broad street.

In the meanwhile, the smoker was started under difficulties. Freshmen surrounded Houston Club, where it was to be held. They barricaded the doors and windows, so that it took the sophomores a full hour to force their way inside. Then while "joy was unconfined" up-

PATROLMEN FOIL SUIT STORE THEFT

Flickering Light Arouses Suspicion and Alleged Burglar is Captured

GOODS THROWN OUT WINDOW

A flickering light in a cloak and suit store at Germantown avenue and Somerset street. This is in another police district, that of the Park and Lehigh avenues station, but the officers investigated, nevertheless.

In the rear of the store in the yard they came across cloaks, suits and dress with a total value of $3000. The articles had evidently been thrown out a window.

The prisoner was turned over to the police of the Park and Lehigh avenue station, where his description was said to be that of a man who had served time.

He was held without bail at a hearing before Magistrate Glenn in the Fourth and York streets station.

Sailor Hurt in Brawl

Jack Tyrrell, a sailor, is in the Methodist Hospital with a fractured skull as a result of a fight last night at Twelfth street and Moyamensing avenue with Richard Wilson, a petty officer of the U. S. S. Dixie, according to the police. Tyrrell is also a member of the Dixie's crew. The police are looking for Wilson.
