

UNFAIR TACTICS CHARGED BY COX

Democratic Nominee Issues Another Statement Criticizing Saturday Evening Post

TALKS OF PARTISANSHIP

By the Associated Press
Dayton, O., Oct. 28.—Another statement charging the Saturday Evening Post with unfair partisanship, was issued today by Governor Cox.

The insidious purpose of the Saturday Evening Post, cloaked under newspaper methods for the last decade and more, has finally been brought to light, Governor Cox declared, stating that it had made misstatements only four days before election, when it was impossible to correct them.

That the Curtis Publishing Co. had been found guilty by the Federal Commission of unfair practices in distributing its periodical, was asserted by Governor Cox, declaring that "big business" was opposed to him, "because it would give it a square deal and nothing more."

Text of Cox's Statement

The governor's statement follows: "When early in the week I called attention to the guerrilla tactics of the Saturday Evening Post on the basis of its last-minute attacks on me, the response of Mr. Lorimer, its editor, was that my action was unethical."

Asks Two Questions

In my statement I charged ulterior interests. Since Mr. Lorimer has seen fit to reply simply in a way that raises the question of ethics, I would like to direct to him in this election which brings the unusual act of partisan support from his paper based upon the desire for a return to normalcy, which is the public's right to prosper by fair methods? Is it because the Curtis Publishing Co. was found guilty of the use of unfair and illegal methods of distribution of its periodical, and of certain contracts and of violation of the Federal Trade Commission ruling?"

Charges Unfair Practices

"These unfair practices prevented competing publishers from obtaining distribution of their publications through the ordinary distributing channels and forced them to distribute through channels which did not have any facilities for a wide distribution. It is a fact that the Federal Trade Commission after extensive hearings on July 21, 1919, and the Curtis Publishing Co. was forced to cease and desist."

FAMILY OF 4 MUTES SEEKS CURE BY FAITH

Parents With Twin Babies Found by Detective Searching for Father Hathaway

The fame of the Rev. Father Harry St. Clair Hathaway, of St. John's Episcopal Church, Norristown, who recently conducted a faith-healing mission at St. John's Episcopal Church, Germantown, has found its way into the Blue Ridge mountains. Proof of that was furnished yesterday when Alpha Barker, his wife Elizabeth and their fourteen months-old twins were found seeking him at Twenty-first and Arch streets. The family, all deaf mutes, was discovered by Detective Joseph Shay wandering aimlessly and helplessly through their inability to make themselves understood. It was with difficulty that Shay, who is the head of the Missing Persons Bureau, learned from the woman that they had come from Calro, W. Va., to be cured by prayer and the laying on of hands.

CHRIST CHURCH RECTOR FOR COX AND ROOSEVELT

The Rev. Louis C. Washburn Says Idealism is Paramount Issue
The Rev. Louis C. Washburn, rector of old Christ Church, has sent a letter to the Pro-League Independents, in which he announces he will support Governor Cox for President and Major John A. Farrell, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, against Senator Penrose.

Mr. Washburn has always been an Independent. As a citizen bound to strive for the purification of politics and the eradication of the dictation of the bosses, I take my stand with the patriots who vote for principles irrespective of party.

There's Nothing New Under the Sun

"The three outstanding questions to be settled by our suffrage are: First, shall idealism be the most interesting development of Cleveland's invasion of Cleveland in the manner in which he insisted upon appealing to his audience for his made-up speeches, one in the open air after reviewing the parade and the other in the army. Adhering carefully to his manuscript, he spoke as if he were chief magistrate of the United States delivering a message to the people, and from his set address, in eulogy of Roosevelt and praise of McKinley, he directed only to his residence in Cuba, the League of Nations and promise a return to constitutional government and an end of what he termed 'Wilsonism.'"

Haldeman, Republican candidate for re-election, will be submitted to the electors of the Seventeenth Senatorial district, embracing Lebanon county and the northern section of Lancaster county, next Tuesday, despite the fact that he died last night.

PRACTICAL IDEALISM URGED

Cleveland, Oct. 28.—Senator Harding opened his final campaign swing last night with four speeches to Cleveland audiences. He spent part of today quietly at a hotel here, resting and conferring with Republican leaders. An automobile ride and luncheon at the Cleveland Country Club were the only engagements of the nominee's program before his departure this afternoon for Akron, O., where he is to speak tonight.

It became known today that the police now are working on the theory that Brines shot Drowes in a quarrel over money.

Throng Welcomes Nominee

Not in twelve years has a Republican presidential candidate been received in Cleveland and Cuyahoga county as Senator Harding was received last night. The throng, which lined the streets from the main station to the 20,000 torch lighters, who marched in parade, and the crowd that listened to his address in Grey's Armory bore evidence of the soundness of the Republican prediction that Senator Harding will carry what has been Democratic Cleveland by a comfortable majority.

Walnut Street Merchants Meet

The first full meeting of the Walnut Street Business Association was held in the Bellevue-Stratford last night. Plans for the coming winter were outlined. Edgar S. Gardner, who presided, gave a short talk on "Good Citizenship."

Pleads for Practical Idealism

For a second time during the campaign Senator Harding emphasized his belief that the only welfare compatible with American life was "practical idealism," with Americans going forward shoulder to shoulder. He said he wanted to create the realization that "Citizenship is great unless it is strong as well as kind."

Washington, Oct. 28.—The attorneys general of thirty-two states were requested yesterday by the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage to separate the ballots of women from those of men on election day to mitigate the approaching chaos, which the association forecasts due to the questioned validity of the ratification of the suffrage amendment.

Wildwood, N. J., Oct. 28.—Alfred Winterburn, a city clerk who was ousted from office on October 6 by the majority commissioners, F. E. The commissioners have passed a resolution declaring the city will make no defense at the certiorari hearing in November. This automatically gives the clerk his position again.

It was from the Drowes that the police learned of a quarrel between Drowes and Brines. The present police theory is that Drowes was anxious to buy a motorcar and had no sufficient money. Brines, though owing Drowes $300, had been able to get an automobile of his own.

The Issue Before the Voters

An Editorial in The Chicago Daily News An Independent Newspaper

Published October 25, 1920

In peoples as in individuals self-reliance is strength, dependence is weakness, and to be weak is to be at once unworthy and ineffective. These elementary truths long have pervaded the very souls of the American people, serving to guide them in great crises. Righteousness exalteth a nation. Freedom to act at the appropriate moment for righteous purposes is more than half the battle. If we Americans have faith in our own idealism as that excellent attribute has been demonstrated consistently in the many years that have passed since this nation's rebirth in the agony of civil war, we should guard most zealously the springs of action fed by that idealism, since they have produced a flood of honorable achievement.

Ours is a forceful, a sinewy democracy. It has had to toil continually with brain and arm to erect, stone by stone, the immense structure that has become the most powerful nation on earth. If at the building there frequently arose a babel of voices, at least there was at all times a great inspiration to sweeten the labor, and there were leaders strong with the strength of an honest, a self-sacrificing purpose. And the work was truly co-operative, representative, vital with popular impulse. Even flaws in plan or in workmanship were so much the people's own that these were taken to heart and made of permanent value thereafter as examples of demonstrated error. Of late years, however, our tugging, sweating, hard muscled democracy has been subjected to occult inspirational treatment. In these years it has been continually admonished to get its decisions ready made from the White House, to substitute for the sum of countless individual judgments a specially fabricated judgment guarded from analysis or revision by mystic "faith in the President."

But this, manifestly, was patriarchy, not democracy; patriarchy that merged into autocracy, since it was applied through the driving force of the national administration. The patriarchal manner has a compelling emotional appeal when well put on. It carried the President through the war period with extraordinary facility in spite of such appalling developments as national unpreparedness for war, unpreparedness projected through many long and anxious months of imminent peril of war; monstrously burdensome war taxation devised and imposed by the party of which the President was in full control, and colossal waste of war funds by the war-making branches of the President's administration. Patriarchy failed him, however, when two years ago the President called upon the American people to elect a Democratic Congress in order that the executive might go on working his will in legislative and administrative affairs. Fortunately for the nation, his autocratic rule was not permitted by the voters to continue that enormous spread of power over the nation's destinies.

In spite of the adverse verdict returned by Americans at the polls in November, 1918, the President a few weeks later made himself the sole authority in negotiating peace for the nation, the sole authority in deciding for the nation the terms on which it should agree to join with other powers in guaranteeing world peace. Having made in Paris, on his individual judgment, decisions for the whole American people bearing upon innumerable grave questions; having done there everything in his power to commit the American nation irrevocably to tremendous obligations involving both foreign and domestic policy, he returned to Washington to insist that the Senate ratify his decisions without modification.

The Daily News has held throughout the long controversy over the covenant of the League of Nations that it would be a calamity to bind the United States to the unqualified terms of that formidable instrument. It has held that the interests of the nation and the world must be safeguarded by a considerable number of carefully framed reservations modifying the terms of the covenant. The reservations that it deems essential are included in the so-called Lodge program. In view, however, of the unbending attitude of the President, which he has succeeded in forcing upon his party and his party's candidate for President, Mr. Cox, The Daily News believes that Mr. Harding, while renewing his advocacy of "an association of nations for the promotion of international peace," is well advised in demanding a complete restudy and restatement of the subject of American participation in a world league to maintain world peace with justice. The conviction that there exists a better basis for peaceful penetration of the foreign strongholds of hatred and revenge than that provided by the treaty of Versailles and the league covenant as it now stands has grown steadily in the passing months, deepening also in intensity as the study of world conditions and world needs has proceeded.

Developments here and abroad indicate that the President's demand that the American people subscribe to a stereotyped covenant of European workmanship, with arabesque Wilsonian trimmings is an unwise and impossible demand. It will not suffice to point to the long array of nations that have subscribed to the covenant and ask why they accepted it if it be not altogether desirable. They had their own reasons for so doing, and as yet they have not succeeded in making it march. We Americans will accept it, or will not, for reasons of our own, reasons deemed sufficient by us. If we reject the present covenant that action will not be due to selfishness, as the President asserts, but to the promptings of true American idealism.

The Democratic party, responding with notable docility to the coercive guidance of President Wilson, demands in its national platform the acceptance of the covenant without material change. So does Mr. Cox, its nominee. Its most authoritative spokesman, President Wilson, charged critics of the covenant with "gross ignorance and impudent audacity." It is a shameful charge. It is leveled at very many sincere Americans. It smacks of intolerance. It is refuted by the reasoning of able minds here and abroad. It is an unpleasant backwash of the free-flowing tide of self-sufficiency that carried the President, surrounded by his personally selected satellites, to the Paris Peace Conference, there to exchange the specific pledges of his fourteen points for a League of Nations so devised as to require the American people to guarantee the permanence of many glaring injustices embalmed in a harsh peace. Bitter words, now spoken against his opponents by the executive who has failed to force his will upon the nation are mere uncouth debris from a crumbling dictatorship.

"As I wrote you on October 23 the denunciation of the Christian religion which was a prominent feature of Harvey's Weekly last week. This journal is a purchased organ of the Republican National Committee. As I wrote you on October 25, Reid, the cartoonist who drew it, was and still is the official cartoonist of the Republican National Committee. I have since learned that the committee not only sent out this cartoon in its free press service, but that it was printed in the October 9 issue of the National Republican, also a subsidized organ of the Republican National Committee. The Postoffice Department reports show that this organ is owned by Mr. Hays, Mr. Weeks, Mr. Hilles, Mr. Adams, Mr. McKinley and others."

"Thus, this shameful cartoon ran a very gantlet of official Republican censorship, ending at last with the endorsement of him whom Senator Harding declares to be one of America's great minds; who claims that Senator Harding is not honest in his room and through his astute planning; who is a frequent and welcome guest in Senator Harding's house; and who will continue to be his confidant and adviser if he is elected President. I refer to George Harvey, as recently as Tuesday evening the confidential dinner companion of Mr. Hays himself."

"I can best express my opinion of the good faith of Mr. Hays and the decency of Republican subsidized journalism by subscribing an additional $15,000 to your campaign."
