

TUMULTY REVEALS PATHOS OF WILSON

"I Want People to Love Me, but They Never Will," President Told Secretary

HAIR WHITE, FIGURE BENT

Washington, Oct. 29.—Painting a powerful word picture of Woodrow Wilson, whom he described as "a man as strangely misunderstood by some and as violently misrepresented by others as any man in the whole history of American politics since the great Washington."

Mr. Tumulty told of that memorable time, April 6, 1917, when President Wilson rode to the Capitol and had read his war message.

"For a while he sat silent and pale in the cabinet room," said Mr. Tumulty. "At last he said, 'Think what it was they were applying. It means death for our young men. How strange it seems to applaud that.'"

President Wilson's great defect is not "as his enemies declare, that he will not take counsel from others," but that he "does not play to the gallery. He is dreadfully poor publicity material. Human from his heart to his fingertips he does not know how to put his humanity on exhibition," declared his secretary.

"Lonely Because of His Genius" "He said to me, 'Tumulty, I do not want to be displayed before the public. I want the people to love me, but they never will.' I have never forgotten the wistful tones with which he spoke those last four words. This man is lonely not because he disdains love. He is lonely because of his genius. He has not been generally understood. People see his dignity, his reserve, but they cannot see his great heart yearning for the love of his fellow men."

"Two pictures are in my mind. First, the Hall of Representatives crowded from floor to gallery with expectant throngs. Presently it is announced that the President of the United States will address Congress. There steps out to the speaker's desk a straight, vigorous, slender man, active and alert. He is sixty years of age, but he looks not more than forty-five, so lithe of limb, so alert of bearing, so virile. It is Woodrow Wilson reading his great war message.

"The other picture is only three and a half years later. There is a parade of veterans of the great war. They are to be reviewed by the President on the east terrace of the White House. In a chair sits a man, your President, broken in health, but still alert in mind. His hair is white, his shoulders bowed, his figure bent. He is sixty-three years old, but he looks older. It is Woodrow Wilson. Presently in the procession there appears an ambulance laden with wounded soldiers, the maimed, the halt and the blind. As they pass they salute, slowly, reverently. The President's right hand goes up in answering the salute. I glanced at him. There were tears in his eyes. The wounded in the ambulance, he in the chair, are alike, casualties of the great war.

"I don't believe in his heart President Wilson regrets his wounds. I fancy he realizes no man could die in a greater cause, but I do sometimes wonder if it ever seems to him strange that when a man has been seriously wounded in his country's service he should be met with sneers and calumnies from his countrymen. I think already the better nature of America is awakening. Those who have joined in the chorus of calumnies begin to grow ashamed of their unchristianous conduct, begin to resent the tricks of politicians which beguiled them into base ingratitude.

"Woodrow Wilson will presently make his exit from the political stage. I am human enough, and all the while I am very human, to want him to live for many years, not only for the sake of his personal friends and the great books which he is going to write, but also to see the vindication which is sure to come.

"Sometimes when I ride around the Speedway and look at the tall graceful obelisk and Greek temple that stand as monuments to Washington and Lincoln, I catch myself wondering if they from their spirit world ever look down upon these commemorations in everlasting stone, and smile through wistful eyes, and think that it would have been happier for them personally if their countrymen had given them more of their hearts during their lifetime and less of stone after death. They asked for bread, the bread of humanity, sympathy and understanding, and we gave them stone."

"Woodrow Wilson will have his monuments; future generations will see him clear-eyed and unprejudiced as one of America's immortals; but I want him to live to realize that he has a place in the warm hearts of his countrymen while he lives."

Waitress Hurt in Elevator Miss Marie Rixon, a waitress, of 1825 Christian street, was hurt in an elevator at a Market street restaurant near Juniper last night. Her dress caught in a safety door and her right leg was crushed. She was taken to Hahnemann Hospital.

CIGARETTE CAUSES FIRE A fire, which is believed to have started from a lighted cigarette being thrown on the sawdust on the floor of the barroom of the Penrose Ferry Inn, resulted in slight damage to the floor. The inn is owned by Daniel Blasi.

$10 FOR LUXURIES TO $1 FOR SCHOOLS

People of State Waste Millions Pupils Need, Declares Association

Pennsylvania, spending $20,000,000 a year at soft drink and ice cream counters, can well afford $500,000,000 a year to provide better school and educational facilities, declares a statement issued by the Public Education and Child Labor Association and sent broadcast to educators and citizens of the state.

The association urges the nomination and election of legislators who stand for better citizenship and a square deal for the children, and the active co-operation of men and women of influence in the community to secure these results.

"In 1919 Pennsylvania paid $75,000,000 for public education," it is pointed out in the appeal. "The total may reach $80,000,000 in 1920 to maintain a school system that, according to the Russell Sage Foundation, is about 50 per cent efficient.

"With $200,000,000 a year miracles of improvement could be wrought. 'Who would claim that such a sum cannot be afforded by a state that spends $300,000,000 a year for pleasure automobiles, $80,000,000 a year for admissions to theatres and other places of amusement, $40,000,000 for candy and $20,000,000 at soft drink and ice cream counters?"

"This state spends annually $800,000,000 a year for luxuries, or ten times as much as it spends for education. 'The public has not as yet expressed in terms of dollars and cents its willingness to pay the price of adequate public education. Young people of the highest natural ability are not attracted to teaching as a career, and many good teachers abandon the calling by reason of its lack of promise for future financial independence. Raising of standards must be accompanied by more generous rewards, both financial and social."

MARY GARDEN ADORES 'COP'

Heart Goes Out to Policeman Who Welcomed Her

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Miss Mary Garden arrived in Chicago yesterday from a successful concert in Louisville. The only greeter on hand was a mounted policeman. The singer will finish the story:

"Think of it! I came to town and not a soul was there to greet me. I felt like a waif. Just as I was stepping into a taxi the handsomest policeman I ever have seen touched his cap and smiled. I returned the smile. Whereupon he tied his steed to a telephone pole and escorted me to my hotel.

"He was gorgeous. He made me feel so happy. He told me that he was single and owned a lot in Ravenwood Gardens. I told him who I was. He answered that a lot of society women were marrying policemen in New York. His first name is Robert. I just adore him. When I told him I am to appear in 'Aphrodite' with the Chicago Grand Opera Co., he was disgusted. I assured him I was to sing and that a statue act was not included in my repertoire.

"I have just received a beautiful bouquet of roses with a request asking that he might call on me. His request shall be granted."

Mr. Seligsohn—Starts Tomorrow— $125,000 Stock Sacrifice To Move Out In Double-Quick Time Men's Suits & Overcoats At the Lowest Prices Known In Years! Sale at Both Stores

1532 Market Street
S. W. Cor. 8th and Spring Garden

Men, just as you read—Mr. Seligsohn sacrifices his profits, disregards costs—he just wants a quick and drastic clearance.

Woolen prices have dropped—they are dropping! These drops will not be reflected in clothing prices this year, because all winter suits and overcoats were already made up when prices started to fall.

Mr. Seligsohn Smashes Prices Even Lower Than the Actual Cost of the Suits and Overcoats

Because he wants a quick clearance so he can go into the market and take the cream of the woolsens and start his factory busy on double-quick time.

But, Man, realize this—the prices Mr. Seligsohn quotes in this sale are even lower than he can hope to produce new garments for. Just that—Mr. Seligsohn, even with prices on woolsens lower, cannot manufacture these same suits and overcoats to sell at these low prices again.

Remember—Mr. Seligsohn's Prices Were Always Lowest—From Factory to You!

Mr. Seligsohn manufactures his own clothes—and it is just as important for him to keep his factory going as it is to sell clothing. That is the reason for this price smash! Don't be one of the skeptics! Man, if you have been waiting for clothing prices to come down—here they are!!!—and they are down to the lowest levels they have been in a good many years.
