

WILL HOLD BONUS PARADE IN PHILA.

American Legion Plans Big Demonstration Like That Held in New York

STATE OFFICES MOVE

Philadelphia veterans of the world war will have an opportunity to show in parade how much they are interested in receiving from the government a bonus.

The Combined Veterans' Conference, headed by E. S. Glavin, and comprised of representatives of Philadelphia posts of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion, the Army and Navy Union, and the Spanish War Veterans, is planning for a big demonstration in favor of adjusted compensation.

This conference, which met Wednesday evening in the Chamber of Commerce assembly room, decided to organize the bonus parade as rapidly as it can be done. In New York the whole affair was put through in three weeks.

Cyril J. Howard, of New York, will give the organizers of the bonus parade the benefit of the experience he gained in assisting the New York veterans in the preparation for their demonstration.

State headquarters of the Legion is sending to all posts a copy of the resolution adopted at the Cleveland national convention calling upon legislators throughout the country to observe Armistice Day fittingly. The William D. Oxley Post, No. 133, of Tacony, is the latest to announce its intention to hold an Armistice Day celebration. Tickets will be distributed to members and to the Ladies Auxiliary.

Philadelphia Alamo Post, No. 270, of which "Caveat" is commander, is commencing to give a victory dance at the Roosevelt, November 12.

State headquarters will be on the third floor of the building on the northeast corner of Tenth and Chestnut streets after today. The quarters at 841 Chestnut street will be abandoned.

The Louis Howard Fielding Post, 41, reports it had a successful smoker last Friday evening. Many old members attended and several recruits were gained. The post is quite active now and is expecting a large attendance at its dance to be held next Thursday, in Knights of Columbus Hall, Thirty-eighth and Market streets.

MORALS AND THE "MOVIES"

Oberholtzer and Hergeshelmer Differ on Censorship

Dr. Ellis P. Oberholtzer and Joseph Hergeshelmer debated the relation of art and morals to the censorship of motion pictures at the Phi Beta Kappa meeting at the Franklin Inn Club last night.

Dr. Oberholtzer defended the censorship on the ground that intelligent people ought to protect the unintelligent. He laid especial stress upon the necessity of preventing the exhibition of pictures which would demoralize children. He regretted a large proportion of the stories told in pictures dealt with crime and violence and said the evidence taken in the juvenile courts indicated such pictures led boys to imitate the heroes in them.

He insisted the censors in Pennsylvania had justified their existence, and said that, although there were only three other states in which there was any censorship, the fact that a certain class of pictures was excluded from Pennsylvania, in which from 8 to 10 per cent of the "movie" business of the country is done, had a moral effect upon the producers of all films. They had been known to reject scenarios on the ground that the Pennsylvania board would not pass them. He honored the time was coming when the men engaged in the business might decide to develop its artistic possibilities. At present, he said, they seemed to be interested in nothing but the money. He said that in discussing a film produced by David Griffith he told Griffith he seemed to underrate the intelligence of the public, and Griffith replied that it was impossible to underrate public intelligence.

Mr. Hergeshelmer disagreed with Dr. Oberholtzer on the necessity of a censorship over any form of art. He insisted the question of morals as such had no place in a discussion of art, the purpose of art being to quicken in the mind of the observer an interest in life.

If an artistic work produced in all sincerity did quicken that interest, then it was its own justification. It was not enough for a writer to say that opium smoking was a bad thing, he must show its evil effects. If he did this skillfully and honestly he would produce the effect he intended, and no one had any right to prevent the circulation of his description of the effects of opium on the plea that it was immoral.
