

BRILLIANT FICTION BY WOMEN

MRS. EDITH WHARTON SURPASSES HERSELF

Her Latest Commentary on Life Reaches a High Artistic Level

After Edith Wharton is dead—may that unhappy day be long postponed—some pupil of Freud will doubtless apply to her literary output the principles of psycho-analysis...

In her new novel, "The Age of Innocence," Mrs. Wharton handles in a new form the motive which has inspired most of what she has written. In doing it she has produced a work of surpassing art...

It is a tale of New York in the seventies of the last century. Its heroine is the Countess Olenska, a member of a New York family, who married a Polish count, lived with him in Europe...

Edwin Balmer, who, in "Via Wireless," "The Indian Drum" and other novels, collaborated with William Hargraves on his own in "Resurrection Rock," his new story...

Mrs. Wharton has never written a more artistic or more satisfying novel. This age of hers is a period of accumulation of knowledge. With this end in view he shows the important part the will play in enabling one to keep in health, as well as its place in disease...

The aim of Doctor Walsh in his "Health Through Will Power" is to revive the appreciation of the place of the will in a sane education. Education should be founded on the training of the will and the formation of good habits...

"Hidden Eyes" is apparently a first novel, written by a writer of a well-built-up structure of circumstantial evidence. By the keen and unerring eye of the camera the ultimate truth is revealed...

There is a fine spirit in former Governor Baldwin's discussion of the law as a career which should commend it to every young man who is thinking of becoming a lawyer. The writer, a leading authority in the profession...

Kermit was his father's companion on many hazardous adventures in Africa and in South America. Colonel Roosevelt's son tells all about these trips in his new book...

A graduate of Amherst, who was in college with Governor Coolidge, both of whom were pupils of Prof. Garman, professor of philosophy—a man who Amherst men, at any rate, believe was one of the greatest teachers this country ever saw...

A brilliant novel of Monte Carlo and its gambling. By probably the greatest novelist writing today. BLASCO IBANEZ' The Enemies of Women

Children's Books: Ashmun, Margaret—"Marion Preer's Summer"; Bell—"Arsonists of Faith"; Mullett, G. M.—"Betsy Lane, Patriot"; Stevenson, Mrs. Sinclair—"Bridget's Fate"; Taggart, M. A.—"Pilgrim Maid"; White, E. W.—"Stories of Luther Burbank"

ROSE MACAULAY'S FINE SOCIAL SATIRE

Under the Name of Potterism She Flays Modern Philistinism

Skilful satire is rare and satire of any kind by a woman is almost unknown. Therefore Rose Macaulay has achieved doubly in "Potterism." It is penetrating satire of a quality that has not been surpassed in recent years...

Miss Macaulay's story deals with the Potter family, a Potter editor and the anti-Potters. There are two twins in the Potter family who profess disgust with the family and the anti-Potters. They have as much contempt for the Potterite novels written by their mother as for the Potterite stuff that their father prints...

Who's latest novel, "The Age of Innocence," will delight all lovers of good fiction

Mystery and Thrill in Newest Novels

The success of the story in London is due partly to its thinly veiled allusions to existing commercial institutions there, but the American public will find it entertaining because the same kind of institutions flourish here...

A DUTCH TRIANGLE Mrs. Martin Writes a Novel of Marital Complications in Pennsylvania

Helien Helmensnyder Martin long personified as a keen observer of the traits and ways of the Pennsylvania Dutch...

THE DOOR OF THE UNREAL. By Gerald Steiner. The door of the unreal is a story of the grotesque, the arabesque, the supernatural and the weird. Based on the old and the new...

THE LAW AS A PROFESSION There is a fine spirit in former Governor Baldwin's discussion of the law as a career which should commend it to every young man who is thinking of becoming a lawyer...
