

N. Y. IRISH WOMEN SLUR BRITISH FLAG

Union Jack Is Torn Down From Theatre and Ripped to Pieces

PICKETS AT WHITE HOUSE

New York, Nov. 8.—Philip T. Case, formerly a member of the Irish Volunteers during the war and now manager of a theatre at Broadway and Fifty-first street, personally hung a new flag across the canopy of the theatre yesterday afternoon after Irish sympathizers had pulled down the flag of Great Britain, which was hung with others of the Allies.

The women appeared outside the theatre, while a workman was putting the finishing touches to the flag decorations, which were set up because of a special theatrical attraction. The man came down a ladder which was tilted against the top of the canopy and went inside the theatre to get some light bulbs.

One of the women climbed the ladder and broke the British emblem loose. She dropped it into the hands of the woman below. They made short work of it, blessing it with a rip. Some of those in the crowd were sympathetic, but others cried "Shame!"

No one offered to molest the women. Mr. Case did not see the insult to the flag, but sent in a call for police when he was told of it. While he was sending the call a man rushed into the office and warned him not to "make trouble for those women."

The stranger struck at him, but this was a major scuffle, and he struck the man on the nose. By the time the police arrived the woman had disappeared. Mr. Case then hung the new flag.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Hundreds of Irish sympathizers marched for an hour last night in single file around the White House as a protest against the recent death of Terence MacSwiney, lord mayor of Cork, who starved himself in British prison.

The demonstration was organized at a meeting of the local branch of the Friends of Irish Freedom earlier in the night, and it was announced it would be repeated each night for seventy-three days, once for each of the days MacSwiney fasted before his death.

Bungalow Parties Blamed in Murder

Continued from Page One

Why I was afraid to confess the whole thing. "When we reached Camden, James went to a second-hand clothing store and purchased a suit—his old one being spotted with blood. After changing his clothes, James threw the old suit with a stone and threw it in the Newton creek.

"Keeping part of the cash, we buried the rest in the Evergreen Cemetery, and then went on a two days' drunk.

"At the end of that time I went to bed, completely broken down. On October 14, James came to my house and told me to go with him to Takeaway for further disposal of Paul's body. I told him I was too sick, but he pulled out his gun and said if I did not go along he would kill me. I went.

"When we reached the bridge beneath which the body was hidden we found it still as we had left it. The sight of the thing made me sick at my stomach and I refused to touch it. James unfastened the rope from the piling and tied it to the back of his car. He then dragged the body out of the water, across the road to the place where we buried it. We had bought the shovels in Medford.

"Fear Made Grave Shallow

"We were afraid to take enough time to dig a deep grave, and the hole was little more than large enough to hold Paul's mutilated corpse. We tied the ankles up to the neck and rolled the body into the grave. After we had covered it up and spread leaves over the place James again threatened to shoot me if I should ever squeak.

"The days, and especially the nights from then till the day James was arrested were like a hell to me. I could not sleep at nights because I was afraid

HIDING PLACE OF CASH TAKEN FROM SLAIN RUNNER

$25,000 of the $75,000 which David S. Paul, Camden bank messenger, was carrying on October 5, the day he was supposed to have been murdered, has been dug up at a spot near the grave of the mother of Raymond W. Schuck, who with Frank J. James, is said to have confessed to participation in the slaying. The cross shows the hiding place in Evergreen Cemetery of my dreams. Most of the time I was sick in bed.

Prior to his arrest and after his name was persistently connected with the crime by rumors, Schuck several times insisted upon his innocence to his father and friends. But he had displayed so much money that they had begun to fear the worst and were not surprised when the authorities placed the young man under arrest.

I have known Schuck for years and seen him grow up, and I never dreamed a thing like this could happen," said Frank Albright, private secretary to Congressman-elect F. F. Patterson, Jr., of Camden, and a close friend of Schuck's father. At that time Schuck could not be the moving spirit in an affair like this. He never had the nerve to commit murder. He showed that by the way he acted after the murder and the fact that he broke down as soon as he was arrested.

"It is one of those unfortunate affairs that comes as the result of bad company and loose habits. Schuck's downfall undoubtedly has been women. The boy held a good position with a telephone company and was really succeeding well. He just got himself into the position where the influence of others overcame his parental teachings and he was led astray. God help him, that's all."

James' Wife Collapses

Mrs. James collapsed when she received word that her husband had confessed to a part in the murder.

Her faith, which had remained steadfast following his arrest and detention in connection with the murder, was apparently unshaken by the confession. In connection with the murder, she had been straining under which she had been laboring for weeks, told on her.

Continued to bed at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Spigle, at 428 Newton avenue, Camden, she weeps continually. Between her sobs, she repeats in a shaken voice, her belief that her husband could not have been implicated in the murder while in his right mind.

William Walsh and John Harris, who had been retained as counsel by James following his detention, said the confession came "as a thunderbolt."

They said they were completely astounded, and that but for the confession they would have believed James guilty "in a hundred years."

At Schuck's home, Twelfth and Liberty streets, in Camden, no one responded to the doorbell. Apparently, the house was deserted.

Would Give $100 to Olympic Fund

Continued from Page One

Fairmount Park, it was held that this was not a municipal enterprise, and the city of Philadelphia as a municipality received no benefit, and there was no moral obligation upon which the appropriation might be sustained.

Apart from the authorities which are numerous and clear as to the unlawfulness of such use of the city's money, the case seems to me likewise clear upon principle. Once it is assumed that any cause which meets with the sympathy of council can be aided by the city's money, there will be no end to the demands made upon the treasury.

This case is a more flagrant one than that of the Negro Convention which you very properly vetoed in clear and convincing language in your message dated June 5, 1920.

In addition to all this, the act of June 10, 1919, Article XVII Section 10 empowering council by a two-thirds vote to "authorize payment for materials furnished or services rendered without a previous appropriation by necessary intention" excludes any other purpose. As the appropriation in this case does not come under either of such heads it is fatally defective."

Small Early Morning Fire

Fire from a gas jet ignited a curtain on the second floor of the home of J. Jones, at 625 1/2 May street, at 6:20 o'clock this morning. The fire was put out by a chemical company before it did serious damage.

Mayor Will Not Deal With Vares

Continued from Page One

majority in House and Senate at Harrisburg will be afraid to go contrary to orders emanating from Penrose.

There have been very definite rumors of a new ward combine similar to that of twenty-five years ago. The threat has been held over Mayor Moore's head that such a combine could work havoc with his plans for Philadelphia.

The fact is the Mayor doesn't care a rap about such rumors. It might be possible that he would view it in the light of a good thing or a godsend.

It would at least, by attempting to hamper, obstruct, hamstring or sandbag the administration, enable him to put the blame squarely on the shoulders of the leaders in such a combine.

And a Vares combine at that.

Plan Looks Foolish

There are two ways of looking at this thing. Such a combine, were it formed, would have to join hands with the Vares. Any individual with one lobe of the brain out of commission and the other working could understand how popular such an arrangement would be!

Then, again, Mayor Moore might organize a ward leaders' union of his own!

There is still a final reason, showing that the chilly and unpleasant logic of facts, in the local situation, are all

JAPAN TO RECALL ARMY

Will Evacuate Chentao Area When Chinese Troops Arrive

Tokio, Nov. 8.—The cabinet, it is reported by the press today, has decided to withdraw the Japanese troops from the Chentao area, along the Korean-Manchurian border, despite the fact that the activities of the bandits and Korean insurgents, to combat which the troops were sent, have not been suppressed, provided that China will undertake to maintain order and protect Japanese life and property.

The diplomatic council has been summoned to consider the cabinet's proposal.

The newspaper Hochi Shimbun adds to its report of this decision the statement that the American, British and French Governments recently inquired as to how long Japan proposed to keep her troops in the Chentao area.

It was announced in a Peking dispatch of October 19 that China had protested against the presence of Japanese troops on Chinese territory and had emphasized its desire that all Japanese troops be withdrawn as soon as the Chinese troops which had been dispatched arrived in the district, the Chinese guaranteeing protection to Japanese subjects.

MUNSING WEAR advertisement with logo and text: WINTER Munsingwear is incomparable for comfort. It fits and covers the form perfectly—the fabric gives with every motion without losing the shape.

Loose Leaf Binders in Stock advertisement with logo and text: YOU can stop in at 529 Market Street and get just what you want right from our stock—without the usual delays!

San Souci advertisement: Food, Service and Surroundings That Are Yours to Enjoy. $1 Luncheon--Platters 70c to $1. or a la Carte Service. Dancing During Luncheon, Dinner and Supper. George Goebel's Musical Entertainers.

KIDNEY TROUBLES Why Suffer Longer? Drink Mountain Valley Water. Famous Curative Water from near Hot Springs, Ark. MOUNTAIN VALLEY WATER CO., 718 Chestnut St.

DEATHS - MULLEN - Of diphtheria at Municipal Hospital on Nov. 6. CHARLOTTE MULLEN, daughter of George and Charlotte Mullen, of 414 N. 5th st., died at 10:30 a. m. at late residence, 3719 E. 13th st. Burial at Mt. Airy on Nov. 10.

Packard advertisement: That sovereign quality of manufacture that for twenty years has been Packard is preserved without compromise or dilution in the new Packard Single-Six Car. It persists not alone in externals, but in the very atomic structure of the car's metals, in the manner in which these are wrought and finished, in the results to which they are designed.

DEATHS - MULLEN - Of diphtheria at Municipal Hospital on Nov. 6. CHARLOTTE MULLEN, daughter of George and Charlotte Mullen, of 414 N. 5th st., died at 10:30 a. m. at late residence, 3719 E. 13th st. Burial at Mt. Airy on Nov. 10.

Under the name of the deceased, the following persons are invited to attend funeral services: MARY ANN GORTON, wife of James Gorton, died Nov. 7, at her residence, 428 Newton ave., Camden. Burial at Mt. Airy on Nov. 10.

Under the name of the deceased, the following persons are invited to attend funeral services: MARY ANN GORTON, wife of James Gorton, died Nov. 7, at her residence, 428 Newton ave., Camden. Burial at Mt. Airy on Nov. 10.

Under the name of the deceased, the following persons are invited to attend funeral services: MARY ANN GORTON, wife of James Gorton, died Nov. 7, at her residence, 428 Newton ave., Camden. Burial at Mt. Airy on Nov. 10.