

TO INDICT SCORES IN WHISKY RINGS

State Department Asked to Refuse Passports to Suspects on Way to Cuba

Chicago, Nov. 8.—The federal grand jury which for the last two weeks has been investigating alleged whisky rings in Chicago and other cities today considered the evidence it has obtained. Federal officials expected scores of indictments to be returned against saloon-keepers and others when the grand jury announces its report. Meantime federal officers asked that warrants be prepared for the entire list of men against whom they had presented evidence of violating the Volstead act.

If the indictments are returned they will come before Federal Judge Keneawick, Landis, and the cases will be tried before him.

It was understood today that federal authorities had wired to Washington asking that no passports be issued the men expected to be indicted, as information had been obtained to the effect that several of the men were planning to leave for Cuba.

Chicago's lid has been clamped down for good. At every cabaret, saloon and safe in the loop last night federal agents were on guard. Thousands of patrons were examined for flasks and bottles "on the hip." Signs were posted in all the resorts ordering no drinking of your own "hip liquor under penalty of arrest and prosecution.

A dozen loop skyscrapers, hotels and hundreds of buildings valued at millions are threatened with temporary confiscation by the government under the federal "abatement of a nuisance" act, according to an order issued by Mr. Clyne last night. "If the government seizes large quantities of illegal liquor in these loop buildings we shall close them up immediately," said Mr. Clyne. The new law is to be invoked this week.

BROTHERS "ALF" AND "BOB" FOUGHT "WAR OF ROSES"

Governor-Elect Taylor, of Tennessee, on 72d Birthday Attains
Goal He Set in Famous Campaign of 1886

Washington, Nov. 8.—They called it the "War of the Roses."

Old timers in Tennessee still tell how brother "Alf" wore a red rose and brother "Bob" wore a white one as they campaigned the state for governor, and how they poked fun at each other. They tell how "our Bob" accused "Alf" of stealing his speeches, and how "Alf," with a great chuckle, admitted it and stole some more.

That was back in 1886. "Our Bob" is dead now, and "Alf" Taylor, the survivor of that historic Tennessee campaign, has just been elected governor of his state at the age of seventy-two years. He will serve in the halls where brother "Bob" served as governor thirty-four years ago.

Politicians of the old school who have managed to hold on in Washington, affectionately recall the two Taylor brothers. Brother "Bob," as he was called in Tennessee, served three terms as governor and then came to the United States Senate. He died here during his senatorial term. Brother "Alf" defeated for governor by brother "Bob," came to the national House of Representatives and served several terms.

There was always a bond of intimacy between them not always found among brothers, and the team was famous in national and state politics for many years.

Brother Alf Reaches Goal at 72
Alfred Alexander Taylor, or Brother Alf, had been out of politics for twenty-five years when he announced himself a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor last spring. His candidacy was looked upon as a joke. When it was discovered to have taken hold of the imagination and affections of Tennesseans.

From that time on it became a one-man race, and Brother Alf was nominated overwhelmingly. He was chosen governor Tuesday on the crest of the Republican electoral wave, defeating Governor H. A. Roberts, Democrat, and thus attained a goal which he set for himself a third of a century ago. He was elected on his seventy-second birthday.

First Race of the Brothers
Taylor's first race for governor was the most famous event of the kind in the history of the state. On June 18, 1886, the Republican state convention met in Nashville, and the late Richard W. Austin, for several terms representative from the Second Tennessee district, nominated Alfred Taylor for governor. The Democratic state convention met August 11, 1886, and after considerable jockeying nominated Robert L. Taylor, "our Bob," for governor on the eighteenth ballot.

The two Taylors made a tour of the state, speaking to immense crowds. They hammered each other's parties and swapped stories about each other, but wound up each day as affectionate a pair of brothers as one would desire to see.

After a tour of the Sequatchie valley the candidates stopped at Bridgeport, Ala., for the night as the guests of a Mrs. Jones, who had heard them speak that afternoon at Jasper.

Woman Stages "War of the Roses"
The good woman was greatly impressed with the consideration the brothers showed each other, not only in the debates at Jasper but about the hospitable friends of her home. The next morning after breakfast she went into her front yard and gathered two bouquets of roses, one white and the other red. Returning to the hall of her home she found Alf and Bob waiting to say good-by. To each she presented one of the bouquets.

"I want you to accept these flowers, gentlemen," said the warm-hearted hostess, "for the sake of your mother. I know that she must be proud of her boys who can be political foes and still be brothers. I know that her heart is with you and that her blessings follow you."

"The War of the Roses" between the Taylor brothers ended in the November election of 1886, Robert being the victor.

Robert L. Taylor, Jr., the son of brother Bob, is in business here in Washington. He remained when Senator Taylor died in the capital. He will probably go to Tennessee for "brother Alf's" inauguration.

The family tradition has it that the Taylors have two passions, politics and home. They are home folks first. It may be that brother Alf and young Bob will pull their chairs up to the open fire some winter night soon, and brother Alf will begin: "Bob, you were only a little fellow then, but now you remember." And that will be a real story.

Data Hounds

The data hound is not peculiar to the advertising business alone. The ancient Greeks spoke of the man who couldn't see the forest because of the trees.

But in the advertising business there are many young men—it is a business itself not yet old.

These young men do not wish, of course, to accept even the obvious—unchallenged.

And so with the aid of co-tangent and slide-rule, a great mass of data is compiled to the confusion of the new advertiser and the amusement of the old.

For, after all, the elements of advertising success are very simple and very hard.

Make worthy goods, put your name on them and tell many people about them continually for many years. For, after all, "psychology" means human nature, "potentiality" means human wants, and "cumulative effect" means repetition.

"The Shortest Route to the Mail-Clute"

A. G. Spalding & Bros., New York, N. Y. Mr. R. J. Hellawell, Secretary, says: "We are using 17 Dictaphones in our Wholesale and Stock Departments. Our only reason for using The Dictaphone is the fact that it saves time and money."

Truscon Steel Company, Youngstown, Ohio. Mr. G. Kahn, General Sales Manager, says: "The 45 Dictaphones used in our organization are responsible for a decided increase in speed with which our correspondence is handled. We have found that a greater volume of correspondence now passes through the several departments. We ascribe this to the ease with which our dictators can dispose of all matters that call for immediate attention."

Lincoln Electric Company, New York, N. Y. Mr. R. W. Baker, District Manager, says: "We are using Dictaphones in all our departments because they speed up the work. The Dictaphone has demonstrated to us its ability to handle at least 33% greater volume of correspondence than formerly. Our salesmen can now dictate their letters at once and be out on their territories much earlier than formerly."

National Jewelers Board of Trade, New York, N. Y. Mr. F. C. Backus, Secretary, says: "The Dictaphones used in our Reporting and Rating Departments make it possible for us to handle an increased amount of correspondence with greater speed. We find The Dictaphone especially convenient for dictating letters after office hours."
