Nancy Wynne Tells of an Entertainment for Webster Settlement House—She Sees Smart Frocks and Talks of the Luncheon at Leas

THAT was a lovely luncheon out at Leas yesterday for Sarah Barringer. The Charles Leas have been entertaining at Sunday luncheons for several years and every one loves to go out there. Catherine Lea is very popular and the place is beautiful. Catherine is an extremely nice girl. Do you remember the thoughtful act she instigated at a luncheon two or three years ago? It was when Katherine Hancock, who was to have attended the luncheon, telephoned out that Jas Smith had come home and had only a short leave before sailing for the war and so she had decided to be married that evening. Didn't Catherine Lea and the other girls at the luncheon go into the Lea hothouses and out of doors to the bushes and vines and gather all manner of flowers and go down to the old church at St. Davids and work so busily that when Katherine entered it to be married, it was a mass of bloom and sweetness.

I have always thought it was one of the loveliest things I ever heard of. For in those war days when husband was torn away from bride of a few days or weeks there was not much joy in a wedding, the tears were far closer to the surface than they usually are at a marriage, though I do think they often lurk in the background, don't you?

HAVE you heard about the affair to be given out at the Overbrook Golf Club next Friday evening? The women of Merion have gotten it up for the benefit of Webster Street House. Mrs. Guy Stewart McCabe, who is a most wonderful impersonator and whose entertainments are always benefits, is to give impersonations of "Peggy" and "Henry." In the latter she impersonates a small boy of about twelve years. I understand this performance will be the fiftieth production of "Henry." After the impersonations there will be general dancing. Mrs. McCabe gave entertainments at 100 camps during the late war, sometimes having appeared before audiences of 8000 persons.

To return to the women of Merion. They, as Merionites, have adopted a little piece of the city, known as the Devil's Pocket. They have started a little settlement at 2320 Webster street and they call it Webster Street House. They hold free baby clinics, sewing and cooking classes, and kindergarten and everything else including "the kitchen stove."

The Merion women have made themselves responsible for the expenses of this settlement and that is why they are giving this entertainment. Mrs. Ernest Bearing is president of the committee in charge of the settlement and the women on the board include Mrs. T. Wood Andrews, Mrs. J. J. Boericke, Mrs. Edward Bok, Mrs. Ross C. Cornish, Mrs. Archibald Ehle, Mrs. H. T. Herr, Mrs. Harold Pender, Mrs. George F. Pettinos and Mrs. Charles P. Vaughan.

MARIANNE HARRIS wore the darlingest frock at her tea on Friday. It was so simple I could not but remark it. Just soft white chiffon over a foundation of white. It was extremely girlish, making one think of the days a number of years back when a simple frock marked a debutante and when satins and brocades and velvets were kept for the year after debut or only worn at the large balls like the Assemblies. Marianne was holding a bouquet of French rosebuds and she looked so sweet I was perfectly charmed with her.

SPEAKING of good-looking frocks, I saw Theodora Lillie in town the other day wearing a very smart one of dark blue serge made quite plain. She wore also a small close-fitting turban of blue duvetyne to match her frock and a French veil. I turned around twice to look after her, which I will acknowledge was not well bred, but she was very good to see.

DON'T you love them when they are all warm and powdery after their bath, and murmur their little soft prayers, close bang up to your knee? Couldn't you just squeeze them till it hurts? Mother felt very bad the other day when she had to be out at bedtime. But father had a great time. He washed small Junior and powdered him and hugged him and was so pleased because Junior was perfectly content and even climbed into bed with no remarks about missing anybody. Fathers like to feel that they count a little once in a while, you know.

But as he kissed Junior good night and the little soft arms went around his neck, a wee voice whispered: "Dad, tell Muvver be sure and kiss me when she comes home." Somehow, Dad was just as pleased as he was before Mother was mentioned. NANCY WYNNE.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES
