

MAY GET BERGDOLL ON PASSPORT FRAUD

Federal Authorities Believe Canada Could Act to Aid United States

USED STOLEN ARMY PAPERS

Federal authorities believe they have found a method of getting Grover Bergdoll extradited ultimately to the United States in the alleged method he used to obtain a passport in Canada.

This, according to the report in the hands of the Department of Justice, was by the theft of an American Legion member's button and papers.

At Washington it was stated today that there is no certainty that Grover Bergdoll is in Germany, despite the reports that have been received. It is considered likely, however, that there is at least a little foundation for these rumors. Two American citizens, returning from Germany, have stated positively that they found evidence that Grover was there, and it is known that the army of occupation has been instructed to be on the lookout for the deserter.

If he is found, the procedure will be for Canada to demand him for violation of the passport regulations. Once in Canada he probably would be returned immediately to the United States, being deported as an undesirable alien.

Flight Was Sensational
The story of Bergdoll's flight across the United States, revealed in the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER of yesterday, is the most sensational episode of Grover's hectic career.
On the May morning when he shot out of the stone gates of his mansion at Fifty-second street and Wynnsfield avenue he headed straight for Baltimore, burning the dust in his big "superstrix" and distancing the pursuit of a couple of patrolmen in the first car they could commandeer.

It is believed that he actually dug up the "pot of gold" which he was supposed to have hid in the hills of Maryland, and for the recovery of which he received permission to come to Philadelphia under guard.
It was evident during his headlong flight that he was plentifully supplied with funds.

"Pot of Gold" May Explain Funds
Nothing in the trial of Mrs. Emma Bergdoll and her four codefendants, who were accused of aiding in the escape of the Bergdoll brothers, would serve to explain how he provided himself with funds if he did not dig up the "pot of gold."

In the Maryland hills, Grover, surrounded and all but tracked down by a cordon of government agents from Philadelphia and Washington, needed all his "foxiness" to escape. But he did escape and headed westward.
The federal agents have outlined the trail he followed with sufficient accuracy. They have learned that he changed his name in city after city, so that he must have used a half dozen aliases before he reached Canada. The trail leads through Columbus, Dayton, Indianapolis, where he bought a new car; Springfield, Ill.; La Crosse, Ind.; Fergus Falls, St. Vincent and Lake-in-the-Woods.

A story, perhaps as thrilling as that of his wild ride across half the country, remains to be told. Winnipeg, which is in the province of Manitoba, which was his refuge on the Canadian side of the line, lies midway between the eastern and western sea doors of the country.

Trail Lost at Winnipeg
It is not known in which direction he traveled after he reached Winnipeg. But it was a long journey either way. It was a choice like that which would confront a man in Chicago who had to make up his mind whether he would flee to San Francisco or New York. Whether he made this journey by rail or bought another automobile and burned up Canadian miles and tire fabric is not known.

The boldest of all his accredited escapades in the flight from the United States was the final one of his alleged theft of the American Legion button and papers from a former soldier of our army.

He met this man in Winnipeg, at the Hotel Wolske, scraped acquaintance with him and pretended he did not believe the American actually was a veteran of the great war. When the veteran grew indignant and offered his discharge and other papers for identification Grover laughed and said the joke was on him.

"I've a friend who would enjoy a joke like this," he is alleged to have said, "I wish you would loan me the papers."
The soldier did so and never saw papers or Bergdoll again.

PLAN TO BUY BOONE'S HOME

Movement Started for Pennsylvania to Purchase Pioneer's Birthplace
Reading, Pa., Nov. 10.—A move to purchase the farm in Exeter township where Daniel Boone, the pioneer, was born, was started at a meeting of the Berks County Historical Society. State ownership of the homestead was suggested and a committee was named to present the matter to the coming session of the Legislature.

The wedding dress of Mrs. Matthew F. Baldwin, wife of the founder of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, was exhibited at the meeting. The dress was made in 1819 and was a specimen of Mrs. Baldwin's handwork, she having used a gold needle in making it. The dress was exhibited by Mrs. Stanley Bright, of this city, a great granddaughter of Mrs. Baldwin.

Nome Residents to Send Reindeer Sled With Food for Polar Bear
Seattle, Wash., Nov. 10.—(By A. P.)—Nome, Alaska, residents are planning to send a snow sled relief expedition across the frozen Arctic to the trading schooner Polar Bear, which is trapped in the ice off the Siberian coast, 225 miles from Nome, according to reports received here. Reindeer will pull the sleds.
The Polar Bear has a crew of five men and less than two months' supplies aboard. The boat is believed to be within fifty miles of the schooner Maude on which Raold Amundsen, Norwegian explorer, is attempting to reach the North Pole.

SUNDAY BASEBALL AGAIN

Bishop Berry Blames Park Commission for Games in Fairmount
The Fairmount Park Commission is blamed as responsible for "an utterly lawless thing" in the granting of permission to play Sunday baseball in Fairmount Park.
This is the declaration of Bishop Joseph F. Berry, in a statement covering his attitude on Sunday baseball. Bishop Berry, while characterizing Mayor Moore as a man of high ideals, argues the Mayor has no right whatever to violate his oath to enforce the laws as he found them, but that he is wrong in making an exception of the Sunday observance law.

The bishop predicts that it may not be long before an effort will be made to open the baseball parks for professional games on Sunday.
It's part of the Parkway.
No parking is allowed on the south side of Arch street between Broad and Fifteenth.
Many automobilists—especially those visiting the city—have found this out after they have been fined. There are no signs warning the motorist that he

SIGNS MIGHT SAVE CAR OWNERS FINES

Parking on South Side of Arch Street, Broad to Fifteenth, Prohibited, but—must not park within this territory. He must learn about it through mere deduction.

Secretary Martin, of the Fairmount Park Commission, said that the square in question is part of the Parkway, and that no parking is allowed on the Parkway—therefore, no parking is permitted on the south side of Arch street between Broad and Fifteenth.
It was pointed out that a couple of signs bearing the words, "No Parking Allowed Here," might simplify matters and, incidentally, save many motorists from wasting money and going away with a bad opinion of the city. There was such a sign in this square some time ago, but it was removed.
An official of the commission said today that trees had been planted along the square mentioned, and any person even only half-suburban, should know that it was no spot for puffing, painting and often smoky automobiles. This same official said the police ought to plant a sign there.

When Superintendent Mills, of the police bureau, was asked why a sign was not placed at the location in question, he said: "That is not in our jurisdiction. It is the Parkway and just the same as though it were part of Fairmount Park. The rules and regulations regarding it are matters for the Park Commission."

When ye Indians brought Presents to the Chandler Children

In the earliest days of the settlement Mrs. Chandler arrived in Philadelphia with eight or nine children. Her husband had died on shipboard, and so indigent was she and her little family that even the Indians took pity on them, bringing them food and other presents.
Certainly this incident affords a compelling illustration of the need every man has of laying by money for that possible "day of disaster."
