while his own efforts failed, is able to point at the even more conspicuous failure of his opponents.

Organized labor remains a method of conducting small local strikes. Since industry ceased in its important phases to be local and became national, organized labor has not learned how to ganized labor has not learned how to make its force felt. Direct action, if it may really be said to have been tried. has failed, or is utterly impossible. The independent labor party has failed. The balance-of-power political method of Mr. Gompers has failed.

The country is in the control of a party which is not benedicen in any respect to organized labor, nor particularly friendly to it. Organized labor is under the leadership of a man who is old and discredited. It is waiting for his decease with no one to put in his place. It is entering a period when its one weapon, the strike, is likely to be ineffective because of increasing unemployment and the willingness of em-ployers to close down their plants. There is not likely to be anti-strike legislation or legislation creating indus-trial courts, not because the party in power is afraid to enact it, but be-cause conditions such as caused the cause conditions such as caused proposals of last year have passed.
