ONSIDE KICK, DISCOVERED BY GEORGE WOODRUFF 26 YEARS AGO, NOT OFTEN USED THIS SEASON

BY ROBERT W. MAXWELL Sports Editor, Evening Public Ledger

SOMETHING has happened to the onside kick this year. This once famous play evidently has been erased from the repertoire of the eastern teams, for thus far it has been conspicuous by its absence. Only once have I seen it used in a big game, and on that occasion it was a mistake. The quarterback, instead of running back after getting the ball from the center, stood in his tracks and kicked straight up in the air and gained all of 5 yards. His teammates who were onside did not know what it was all about, and made no effort to get the ball.

RE

Coaches now believe that the play is entirely too dangerous to use in important contests. It isn't successful ore than once in twenty times because the team on lefense always is looking for that particular play. With the opponents lined up to meet a forward-pass attack, it is almost impossible to get away with a short punt. The defensive halfbacks usually smear the kick, thereby gaining many yards for their side.

A couple of years ago one of the smaller eastern teams worked an onside kick in a game against one of the "big three" and almost scored a touchdown. The play was successful because a regular punt formation was used. and the rear halfback, instead of running straight down the field, ran back of the kicker. Nobody was looking for him, and he picked up the ball after it had come to a stop. This is the best onside kick that could be used. because the punter tries for distance, and if there is any slip-up down the field the onside man has a good chance to recover the ball.

Still, the success of the play in the past has been due to the fact that it has been unexpected. For example, take the forward pass used by Penn State against Pitts-burgh last year. State had the ball on its own 5-yard line at the start of the game. Punt formation was called, instead of kicking the ball a forward pass was made to Higgins, who ran 90 yards for a touchdown.

THIS same play has been tried many times that season, but not once has it been successful. This is because the secondary defense has been on the lookout for it. And it is the same with the onside kick.

Onside Kick Is Twenty-six Years Old TT WAS just twenty-six years ago this fall that the onside kick was discovered. George Woodruff, who coached Penn in 1894, was responsible.

According to Harry A. Mackey, a former Red and Blue captain, and then assistant coach. Woodruff was werrying about the approaching game with Princeton, to played in Trenton. The Tigers were unusually strong that year and Penn knew that something new had to be oprung if a victory was to be scored.

One morning Woodruff came to the breakfast table, his face wreathed with smiles.

"I had a dream about a new play last night," he said, "but I won't discuss it until I try it out at IIII School. If it works as well as, I expect, we will give it to the varsity in the afternoon.

In those days football coaches were not numerous, and Woodruff held down two jobs. Every morning he would go to Pottstown, Pa., and coach the Hill School team.

That afternoon Woodruff gave the quarterback kick to the University of Pennsylvania football team. The quarterback, standing about one yard behind the line of scrimmage, would kick the ball to either the right or left and the halfbacks and fullback were allowed to get the ball on the fly or after it hit the ground.

This play was practiced all week, and it was mas tered for the Princeton game. It was entirely new and had to be explained at great length to Paul Dashiel, the greatest of all football officials, who umpired the game. . . .

PRINCETON was fooled and Penn. mainly through the use of the guarterback kick, won the game by the score of 12 to 0. The next year all of the big colleges were using the play.

T. RICKARD IS HOLDING UP

WITH the strict eligibility rules now being enforced, W in a majority of the colleges, the tramp athlete almost has passed out of the picture. Only on rare occasions does he appear in the line-up and everybody knows about it. Proselyting is getting to be a thing of the past and the gridiron game is improving because of it.

In the olden time every college-and there were no exceptions-had a flock of brawny freshmen at the start of the season who represented their college on the football field instead of the classroom. Beef and brawn were more desired than brains.

Now it is different. A student is not eligible to play on the varsity until he has completed one year of college work. This means the one-year rule makes it impossible to play any one except students.

Karl E. Davis, the wide-awake graduate manager of Pittsburgh, who, through his publicity work, brought the Panthers out of the rut and into the front rank, has come out with a new idea, and it should be adopted by other colleges

"You fans, who like to talk football and boost Pitt's team," he writes, "should not overlook this. It is PROPAGANDA that you should hammer into every college man you meet. It will all help to bring the proper credit to Pitt for what is being done in football.

"There are no 'floaters' or tramp athletes on the Pitt. football team. We have the one-year residence rule in effect, which means that every man on the team has been enrolled as a student one full year before he is eligible to compete. There are only two other colleges in this state which have this rule, viz: Pennsylvania and Penn State. You may be reading about 'migratory birds' who are going from school to school, playing football. Pitt has none of these.

"Pitt has eligibility rules on a par with those of any of the larger institutions and, best of all, lives up to them to the letter. In addition to the one-year residence rule, there is the rule debarring post-graduate students, the three-year competition rule to apply to all men entering after last September.

"The graduate manager has learned through investigation that S5 per cent of the football letter men in the last fifteen years have been graduated and are muking good in the business world. Can any school in the United States show a better record?"

. COLGATE also is proud of its elegibility rales. No "jobs" are being handed out at Hamilton and the team is going through a disastrous season, but happy because of the fact that only real students are on the team.

Phils Chose Wisely

THE selection of Gainsville, Fla., as next year's training camp for the Phillies is a wise one. The ball players will work out on the University of Florida athletic field and have the use of a big gymnasium, which was built recently. Conditions are ideal there for a training camp.

The New York Giants trained in Gainsville in 1919, but last year went back to San Antonio. John McGraw has been a great booster for the place and was instrumental in getting the Phils to go there.

Clarke Off the Rollers

JIMMY CLARKE, who for six years ran the Palace roller skating rink at. Thirty-ninth and Market streets, has quit the skating game and converted the place into a huge ballroom, which will open tomorrow night. They say it is one of the largest in the country and will be the headquarters of the Prune Club and Boosters' Association of Philadelphia.

Jimmy Clarke has been a prominent figure in athletic circles for years and did more to boost the roller skating game than any other person in Philadelphia.

This superiority became more marked when the Navy eleven dropped its first game to North Carolina State. But the pendulum has now swung back. The Army was unable to stop Notre Dame, while the Navy, after showing big improvement against Princeton, came through and stopped Georgetown abruptly.

There have been many fine tackles, but extremely few who outclass the field. The reason that no so-called cham-pionship was awarded Hervard last year was that in her regular season she MICHIGAN came back a big jump from last year, but not quite far enough to take the championship hur-dle.
