

POPULATION FLUX HITS DEMOCRATS

Republican Negroes Go North and Republican Business Men Go South

Washington, Nov. 18.—Democratic strategists, analyzing the vote in the presidential election, believe they have discovered one reason for the greatly increased Republican vote in northern and border states, and for the steadily growing Republican strength in southwestern and Gulf states. They lay it to the movement of Negroes north and the movement of northern farmers and business men south.

Every Negro who comes north means another Republican vote, though subtracting nothing from Democratic strength in the "solid South." Every northern Republican farmer who moves to Mississippi, Georgia or Alabama, every oil man who goes into Oklahoma or Texas, every business man who moves to the Carolinas or Florida—or nine-tenths of them—add new strength to the Republican vote in the South and Southwest.

Democrats view this situation with alarm, and the fear is expressed that unless measures can be taken to counteract it, the interchange of populations between North and South may in time wipe out the "solid South." Every Republican who moves to the South, every oil man who goes into Oklahoma or Texas, every business man who moves to the Carolinas or Florida—or nine-tenths of them—add new strength to the Republican vote in the South and Southwest.

Although the trend of negro northward has been apparent for many years, the movement was so gradual as to attract little attention until the United States entered the war. This created a new condition. Northern industries needed laborers. The Negro divisions in the army were limited in number. As a result many thousands of southern Negroes came north to take the regular places of white laborers.

They moved into Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and some of the states of the Middle West, obtaining employment in steel mills, packing houses, stockyards and on the railroads. Finding the work more lucrative than in the South, all but a small percentage remained as long as their jobs lasted.

Because of restrictions and intimidations in the South relatively few negroes vote in states below the Mason and Dixon line. In border states, however, the negroes in the recent elections asserted themselves to an unusual degree, and with the assistance of Republican politicians were enabled to vote in large numbers in Maryland, Tennessee and Oklahoma. This piled up the Republican vote in those states and enabled the Republicans to carry Tennessee against their fondest expectations.

Of perhaps greater significance, so far as its ultimate effect is concerned, is the movement of northern Republicans into the South. In recent years southern resources have been largely developed by northern capital, and there seems to be no question that the big Republican vote in Oklahoma and in some sections of Texas was due to this influx of northern business men—principally oil men. In Louisiana, Mississippi and the Gulf states, on the other hand, the growing Republican vote is declared to be due largely to the arrival of thousands of farmers and their families from Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska and Minnesota, many of whom are selling their northern farms for high prices and going in for stock-raising on the worked-out or poorly developed lands of the lower Mississippi valley.

Here's a union suit made to fit your build exactly

JUST as if you were measured for it, you can get a "Harvard Mills" Union Suit that will fit you to a "T". Simply ask for your size in a "Harvard Mills". It has been tailored and cut by hand to fit—with the "give" and "take" to follow every line of your body. It will not bind nor pull. "Harvard Mills" yields readily to every movement. Shoulders conform to your build and do not pull. The sleeves are tailored in like those in a well fitting coat therefore not bunching nor binding under arms. Crotch and seat are made absolutely right.

These and other features give real quality and comfort to "Harvard Mills" and make it truly "a gentleman's garment."

A Real MAN'S Christmas Gift

For the 300 odd mornings when a minute is an hour long. Saves time and temper when both are needed—when mislaid soap means misconnections and a bad start for the day's business.

The DUO LATHER BRUSH is one of the big little things in a busy man's day. The cream is in the handle—like a cartridge in a gun. A half turn of the handle, a dip of water and it's ready for the shave. No soap, no shaving mug, no mess to clean up. When he's through the DUO is rinsed like any other brush.

A Useful, Intimate Gift—Fully Guaranteed

Nothing you can give the self-shaver will meet his approval like a DUO LATHER BRUSH. It will serve and delight him every morning of the year for many years. It costs no more than the old type brush of equal quality. Each refill holds enough cream for sixty shaves—a two months' supply.

Extra refills of cream can be obtained everywhere, at hardware, drug and department stores—price 25 cents each.
