WOMEN POLITICAL LEADERS RESENT RABBI'S CRITICISM

Say Krauskopf Is Unduly Prejudiced and Defend Part Sex Is Taking in Political Affairs

Women political leaders of Philadelphia are aroused by Rabbi Joseph Krauskopf's sermon yesterday, in which he said that while it was all right for women to vote, they should not attempt party leadership or political speaking or strive to enter "man's field of work."

Thinks Rabbi Prejudiced

"He said women should take part in civic affairs. How can they without being active in politics? Most men have expressed their delight in the fact women are at last entering active citizenship. They are glad to have our interest and support, our woman's viewpoint. I believe Rabbi Krauskopf is unjustly prejudiced for some reason. A man who has watched carefully the recent campaign and the women who are working for better government and
