of Condemnation Attacked in Mandamus Suit to Force Payment of $121,000

PRICE CALLED EXCESSIVE

Assistant City Solicitor Rosenbaum, efore Judges Martin and Monaghan, oday in Common Pleas Court, declared that the act of 1915, which gives the ark Commission the power of eminent omain, is unconstitutional.

domain, is unconstitutional.

The court heard arguments by Mr.

Rosenbaum and Colonel Sheldon Potter
on a writ of mandamus sought by J.

Morgan Lister to force the city to pay $121,000 for a piece of property in

Germantown seized by the Park Commissioners.

"The commissioners may be very estimable gentlemen," said Mr. Rosenbaum, "but they certainly were all wrong in this. If we permit such a precedent the commissioners will be able to come down to the Parkway any time they want and seize land near-

Celonel Sheldon Potter, representing Mr. Lister, argued that the commission had acted with strict propriety in seizing the land, which is an eleven-acre tract bounded by Carpenter street. Allen's lane and Wissahickon avenue. It adjoins the Park, and a little stream wa through it and empties into the issablekon.

"The commission took the land because it wants to preserve the water-shed free from contamination," said Colonel Potter, "This stream empties into the Wissahickon and the Wissathosess, died yesterday in her apartment hickon in turn into the Delaware. The Park Commission seized the property and the owner demanded $121,000 a payment. The Board of Viewers ecided in favor of this sum, and the ark Commission did not protest.

Perpetual Adoration and Work for Po Churches. The articles on exhibition in-cluded hundreds of articles used in the celebration of mass. Notably amor Notably among the collection was a benediction set made in Shanghai which will be presented to a church in this city. Some of the vest-ments were handpainted, instead of the usual embroidered designs. Special services were held in the aft rnoon, at which a sermon was preached by Monsignor Turner, who spoke of the work of the society in furnishing vestments and altar vessels to poor churches. Monsignor Turner gave benediction and blessed the vestments.
