

TO OPEN INSTITUTE OF POLITICS IN 1921

Distinguished Scholars Will Discuss International Relations at Williams College

TO FACILITATE RESEARCH

Williamsstown, Mass., Nov. 26.—An institute of politics, proposed by Harry A. Garfield, president of Williams College, and authorized by the trustees in 1913, but delayed in opening by the war, will have its first session at the college from July 28 to August 27 of next year. The subject for next summer's session will be "International Relations," and it is planned to have lectures by men of international prominence.

"It is proposed," said the announcement, "to bring together in Williamsstown for a month or six weeks each summer a selected company of eminent scholars and social students; to offer courses of lectures by men of national and international distinction; to organize round-table discussions by members of the institute and to provide facilities for research and intensive instruction for students in special fields."

An unnamed benefactor has provided funds to cover the expenses of the institute for three years.

The board of advisers of the institute is composed of the following:

William Howard Taft, former President of the United States; Charles E. Hughes, professor of history at Harvard; John Bassett Moore, professor of international law and diplomacy at Columbia; Philip M. Brown, professor of international law at Princeton; Edwin A. Alderman, president of the University of Virginia; Jesse S. Reeves, professor of political science at Michigan University; Edward A. Birge, president of the University of Wisconsin; W. W. Willoughby, professor of political science at Johns Hopkins University; Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago; and James Brown Scott, secretary of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.
