"Boots" Puts on Show for Jail Companions

Peter Treadway and Marie Phillips-Williams, Ross, etc., "performed" for the City Hall audience last night in the City Hall cell block in the best cell in the room, known as the "soft-bed cell." She was singing "Smile Away."
A prisoner in the fourth row shouted: "Hello, 'Boots'."
The girl didn't answer, but Treadway did. "What?"
"Who don't want to talk to you," the other prisoner answered. "How long have you been in this outfit, anyway?" Treadway laughed.
A moment later he jumped from the bed and grabbed the bars of the cell.
"Say, kid, what about a little walk tonight?" he yelled.
"Just right," the girl answered. "Well, get your things on; I'll be right over." He laughed like a stage comedian.
The prisoner in the fourth row burst out again: "Boots, sing for us."
The girl sang "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles."
The audience applauded.

Thirty arrests have been made in West Virginia and Ohio in efforts to catch the men wanted for the murder of Henry T. Peirce, who was found slain a week ago at 2007 Market street.

Detective Henley, of the murder squad, is hoping the suspect may turn out to be the man for whom the Philadelphia detective will be used.

Augusto Pasquale, still protesting that Blakely Coughlin is alive, has begun his life term as No. 6735 in the Eastern Penitentiary. "The Crank's" last words to Sheriff Jacob Hamilton, who delivered him to Warden McKenty yesterday, were: "The baby is not dead. I cannot tell you about it now. But when I am in there and have plenty of time I will write it all out and then you can go and get him."

Cameras Crank Merrily as "Mob" Storms Whitehall

London, Nov. 29.—(By A. P.)—What at first might have been mistaken for a genuine move upon the government buildings in Whitehall was made this morning, when a small crowd attempted to pass the barriers recently erected by the police at the entrances to Downing street and King Charles street. The crowd, however, was made up of about 150 superstitious persons who were carrying cameras for photographic purposes only.
