NEWEST WORDS, LATEST INFORMATION—
This greatest of abridged dictionaries, like the unabridged Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary from which it was derived, is based upon the highest scholarship. It defines 83,000 terms of all kinds,—more than any other dictionary of its size—including the very latest words that have come into the English language during and since the recent war. It is the only book of its kind which has its entire contents arranged in one alphabetical order. Its 900 pages include important facts of interest regarding persons, places, countries, states, battles, treaties, mountains, rivers, inventions, and scores of other topics.

IN ADDITION TO THESE EXCEPTIONAL FEATURES, the volume contains full-page illustrations, scientifically correct and unusually attractive, and also hundreds of smaller illustrations, which serve the purpose of visualizing the information sought after. Thorough, practical, and instructive treatments of synonyms are included, giving not mere lists of synonymous words, but examples of their use in actual sentences that illustrate their varying shades of meaning. It contains numerous lists, phrases, and tables on astronomy, foreign and American coin denominations, weights and measures, the metric system, chemical elements, presidents, sovereigns, laws, prefixes and suffixes, foreign words and phrases, etc.
