The Wanamaker Great Distribution of Knit Underwear at Half

Mr. Bright-Eyed, Bushy-Tailed, Soft-Coated Gray Squirrel

sits high up in his leafless tower, laughing at the last robins as they take leave of their old haunts among the forest trees to make their long flight southward. During the Summertime the squirrel frisks and frolics within the foliage of the woods, safe from forbidden gunners. When Winter comes he hides and sleeps in his snug storage house of food in the hollow of the tree, where he has a goodly store of nuts and grains to last him until the snow and cold have gone.

But, Mr. Squirrel is a selfish old thing who does not care to share his good things, not even at holiday times.

Everything in the way of fine beautiful silks for gifts is here, we believe. Prices start as low as $1.25 for a white habutai and go very gradually up to a fine French brocade at $15 a yard.

These are not presented as representing a perfect model or ideal, but are intended to be helpful and suggestive in fitting up the various kinds of rooms that children would naturally delight in, children all the way from dear little infants up to sturdy young rompers.

There is an infant's room or nursery, with every requisite from he scale for webhing the baby to the decorative wall panels done in the soft, inarticulate tones, appropriate to the infant mind.

The Noah's ark room is a combination playroom and juvenile iving room. Here the furniture is built on true chi'dish lines and it is very substantially constructed for knockabout/ ervice.

There is a "Mother Goose" room, a "soldier oom" and two trikingly furnished "young" bedrooms, one in a prmilion shade, he other in deep blue, the color-note being carried, ut very effectively in the draperies and general furnishings.

The panels of frieze decorations in each apartment are intended to fit the comprehension and stimulate the imagination of young minds

Everything in the exhibition is for sale-pictures, furniture, draperies and all, either individually or in complete sets.

As a Christmas Gift for a Child

it would be hard to imagine anything so full of delight and value as the furnishings of one of these unique rooms. Fifth Floor, Juniper

Have you ever noticed the marked inclination in children toward things that are "their own size," things that fit their own longings and requirements?

A little girl doesn't have to wear mother's hat or coat and she would also rather have furniture and pictures and things of "her own size" and kind-not merely for play but for use-if she could get them.

In sizes for boys of 3 to The Furniture Store has done something believed to be quite original, something to provide little ones with the kind of furniture and pictures they long to have for their own use and enjoyment.
