Nancy Wynne Hears of a Debate on "Manners" to Be Held by Members of Junior League—She Sees Several Debutantes in Pretty Street Costume

I AM glad to see that the Junior League is coming up once more in Philadelphia. Somehow, it rather slumped during the war. That is, other things took the place of the league and the Emergency Aid Aides and the National League of Service took its place.

WELL, have you heard about the Junior League meeting? There has been much talk about modern manners and those of ten or fifteen years ago, and so the league, after much discussion of the recent performance, is holding a debate between Mrs. Edward Ingersoll, the former Emily Yank, who will stand for old-fashioned manners, and Marion Savage, who will defend modern methods. They think it will be well to hash the thing out.

Of course there is a difference between things that are just plain bad taste, take for an example, universal Christian dancing, "O Come All Ye Faithful," which was done at a recent ball, and which could not call it sin, and girls dancing and kicking to the tune of that well-known hymn, which was jazzed about, and which is anything but heard.

Well, I will certainly be curious to hear the outcome of that debate which tells me that good taste will prevail. These girls are too well bred and too honest not to see things which are, but it's mighty interesting, isn't it?

Now what did you think of Nancy N saying that the Domino Club performance would be sold last night? It wasn't, but you see the word who sent me in the note just said Tuesday, and so I thought, of course, bless your Tuesday of this week, and so you hear, it's two weeks off, and you have another pleasure to look forward to, rather than back upon.

It's to be given at the Woodland avenue, and there are a great many women interested in it. Besides Mrs. Franklin Baer, Mrs. Edward and Mrs. Bob Montgomery, all of whom I mentioned the other day, the patronesses include Mrs. Henderson Supple, Mrs. Stanley and Mrs. John J. Hays, Mrs. Elizabeth and Mrs. Philip Steinmetz. The Domino Club is made up of boys who are students at the University of Pennsylvania, and they take girls' parts in their plays, just as the girls take men's parts in their school plays. It's great fun!

ELIZABETH WARNER is a good-looking girl, I think. I saw her on the street the other day wearing one of the smartest gray squirrel coats I have seen for a long time. And her hat was a close-fitting turban of dark red crepe.

Just a little way down the street I met Carol Smith, Mrs. Howard Wetherill's good-looking daughter, who is also a debutante this season. She was wearing a stunning coat of dark-blue serge finished with a wide collar of opossum fur. Her jaunty hat of blue velvet was exceedingly becoming also.

ANNY had Dickie out walking the other day, when they met a man with a whole armful of red and green balloons. Dickie gazed at the balloons with bigging eyes, and Anny, being a regular kind of a girl, said: "Dickie, you shall have a balloon; which do you want, dear, a red or a green one, and which shall I buy for you?"
