DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

"The Magic Artist" By DADDY

The Snow Bear Giant of the Woods didn't expect white bear to come moving him. He thought the white bear at a snow statue and, of course, a statue couldn't move.

siant raised his gun, aimed at the and pulled the trigger. Click! went the gun, and that was all dant had forgotten that he had lil his bullets at the snow rabbits. ow shulrrel, and the snow deer. He have any left for this flerceed the giant, and with that he picked ty up, threw her upon his shoulder, sprinted down the hill.

Tw-oo-oo!" howled the bear once
e. Peggy, looking back, saw that it coming at great speed. And glancto one side she saw that she and the it were not alone in fleeing before it, ming beside them were Hoppity-Hop a dozen other rabbits while leaning past without paying him

ped. Saying this, he haused for ment to boost Feggy up among the neches of a pine tree. Before he him-could climb after her, the bear was dose that the only thing he could do vas to turn and run o turn and run Ow-oo-oo!" sounded the bear's how!, strange to say, the bear seemed to e run faster than its how!, or the hind. "Woof!" grunted the giant as he flew through the air, the breath telus only a snow bear," gasped the Giant of jarred out of him. Whish! the giant dove head foremost into a huge snow drift below the bank. Whack! the bear smashed into him again, driving him out of sight into the snow.

Peggy was scared. She thought it the woods. "But the mysterious artist who made it must have put powerful magic in it to make it run so fast!"

Peggy couldn't understand the matter at all. She dimbed down from the tree and ran toward the snowdrift, and right at the edge she found the magic that Peggy was scared. She thought it was all up with the Giant of the Woods. That flerce bear would surely eat him up. ["Woof! Woof! Woof! I'll save him!" barked Toddie Pupkins bravely dashing down the hill. He leaped over the bank and plunged into the hole made by the giant and the bear. My. how Toddie Pupkins did make the smow fly! He snapped and he snarled and he dug furlously with his paws. He dug so hard that he soon dug down to the half-smothered Giant of the Woods.

"Ki.vi! Where's flat bear." barked. Now who do you think the marked.

"Ki-yi! Where's that bear." barked Toddle Pupkins And sure enough, the is? where was it a loo is sign of a snow bear in that drift—just charte drift. Do you think the giant will catch him?
And what will happen in the next chapter? Guess! sign of a snow bear in that drift—just unlets at the snow rabbits. In the snow deer. He arry left for this fleresbear. The would be upon aster. It would be upon unte. We'll have to run" that, and with that he picked rew her upon his shoulder, down the hill.

"howled the bear once" howed the bear once "bear in that drift—just unlet the snow are in that drift—just unlet the snow are in that drift—just unlet the snow bear in that drift—just unlet the sign of a snow bear in that drift—just unlet the snow bear in that drift—just unlet the snow bear in that drift—just unlet the sign of a snow bear in that drift—just unlet the sign of a snow bear in that drift—just unlet the snow are in that drift—just unlet the snow are in the snow are in that drift—just unlet the snow are in the sno
