Nancy Wynne Sees Smart Costumes—She Tells of Luncheon for Miss Shober—Sammy Writes to Santa Claus

YOU do see such pretty clothes this year, it seems to me. I met Anna Strawbridge Claghorne yesterday in the street and Celestine Warder too. They were going to the shops from the train, as I met them near the station. Anna was wearing a beautiful top coat of fur and a blue velvet hat which was most becoming. She is getting prettier all the time, it seems to me. Celestine was simply glowing with color and life as she always is. She wore a big top coat of dark brown and a brown velvet hat trimmed with fur that was awfully becoming. Celestine came out last year, and as for Anna, having been married as much as two years almost and having a lovely baby, too, it just doesn't seem possible, she looks so young.

I AM so delighted to hear that Ruth Draper is coming to Philadelphia again and this time to the Academy foyer. She is to give her interpretations for the benefit of the Smith College endowment fund and, of course, she gives them under the auspices of the Smith College Club. There are about a hundred graduates of Smith in this city, and Mrs. Ross Cornish is president; Mrs. W. W. Adams, vice president; Marion Butler, secretary, and Carolyn Reed, treasurer.

Ruth Draper is so attractive and does such splendid work I never miss an opportunity of hearing her. She has often visited here and has a great many friends in Philadelphia. She is a daughter of a well-known New York judge and is very talented.

She is now playing in the development of English dramatic art, and her impersonations are so vivid, that without apparent effort she peoples the stage with characters and you almost think you see them. She has stayed here as the guest of Mrs. Robert Lesley and has been entertained by a number of other prominent women.

MRS. SAM SHOBER, who is visiting here from Colorado Springs for a short time, will give a luncheon today at the Ritz-Carlton for her daughter, Agnes Shober, who is a debutante of the season, and who was introduced at the tea given by the Congnham Stevenses for their daughter, Dorothy and Agnes, who is their niece. There will be about twenty-five debutantes at the luncheon and they will go afterward to the theatre.

I HEAR that Edith Newlin Hobbs and her husband are coming on from Boston to spend the Christmas holidays with Edith's parents, the Dick Newlins, at their home in Whitford. Edith, you remember, was married in September in Bryn Mawr, and has been living in Boston since then. She is one of the sweetest girls, and every one will be so glad to see her home again I am sure. She is a sister of Alice Newlin, and you remember her brother was an ambulance driver during the war and lost his life while driving his car through a perfect rain of shells.

I think Edith was one of the prettiest and most graceful brides I have ever seen. She is so animated and has such lovely coloring.

SPEAKING of weddings reminds me of Billie Van Leer's wedding in New York today. His bride is Agnes de Selding, and they are to be married this afternoon in St. James' Episcopal Church, New York. I hear that Agnes is most attractive, and isn't it nice, they are going to live here? Josephine Reeves, of Germantown, is to be a bridesmaid, and Spencer Jones, Edward Stoever, Harry Adams and Ned Longstreth, all of this city, are to be among the ushers.

Miss de Selding is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Shrewsbury de Selding, of 65 East Seventy-sixth street. Quite a number of Philadelphians have gone over to New York to attend the wedding.

SAMMY wrote a letter to Santa Claus the other night, but he did not ask for anything but a new doll coach for little sister Elise. That evening mother heard a great knocking and bumping going on out on the stairs shortly before bedtime, and went out in the hall to investigate. There was Elise, who is five years old, tolling up the stairs toward the attic, dragging her old doll coach after her step by step; puffing and puffing and blowing, but going up just the same. "Why, darling," said mother, "what are you doing?" "I'm hidin' thith ole toach," said Elise, "bruvver begged Santy for a new one, an' if he theeth thith ole one he won't leave it."

MISS RUTH PACKARD INTRODUCED TO SOCIETY

Large Ball Given in Honor of Debutante Last Night at Ritz-Carlton

Miss Ruth Packard, one of the most prominent of the season's debutantes, was formally presented to society last night at a ball given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Packard, of the Meadows, Villanova. The ball was held in the Grand ballroom and adjoining rooms of the Ritz-Carlton, which were transformed into Yuletide bower. Festoons of lycopodium hung gracefully from all sides of the rooms forming a curtain-like effect at the arches and various entrances of the ballroom. Hundreds of tiny red electric lights intermingling with Christmas, spruce and evergreen trees, were artistically banked about the rooms, while a lattice work of southern smilax glowing with sparkling red lights and poinsettias partly hid the stage.

Sprays of holly and mistletoe interwoven with smilax and poinsettias hung from the chandeliers and ceiling, giving the effect of an enchanted Christmas garden.

The reception room in which Mrs. Packard and the debutante received the guests was transformed into a bower of climbing poinsettias set with sweet scented pine and spruce trees aglow with lights, lending a most picturesque background.

Mrs. Packard was handsomely gowned in light blue brocade. Miss Packard looked charming in a Colonial costume of white satin cut round at the neck and made with a hoopskirt.
