CENTRAL ELECTRIC AND LOCK CO. -1309 ARCH STREET-

THE man is "Jim" Ernest, manager of our Engine and Pump Department, an expert on industrial power supply.

"Nine times out of ten," says Mr. Ernest, "the engine should be a Fairbanks Super-Diesel, because heavy oil costs less than any other fuel, and the Super-Diesel has no external ignition devices, even for starting."

Of course we sell many other types from the 2 h. p. "Bull Dog" for gasoline up to the 260 h. p. "Buckeye" for power plants. But the 20 and 30 h. p. Super-Diesels are the sizes most used by the average small shop.

For a country house, a "Universal" electric lighting plant and an electric automatic water system are really essential. If your factory needs more power, or if you are afraid of coal shortage, ask Mr. Ernest to recommend a suitable oil engine
