Mr. Rhawn, with that light and airy Mr. Rhawn, with that light and niry spirit so characteristic of limerickers, boasted at home that he had sent in a line and that he thought it was a good one. His family at once started to joke with him, pretending that the mere fact that he had entered the contest was a guarantee that the prize was his.

In fact, so unmercifully did they "ride" him that, to silence them, he made this foolish promise to Mrs. Rhawn:

Thawn:

"If you'll keep quiet about it, 1'll indorse the check right over to you."

You see, he really didn't expect to win. But when one of the limerick editors called on him in his pretty home at Edgewater Park, N. J., and informed
