

Things You'll Love to Make

Square Play Apron
An easily made dainty little apron for a tiny tot in this square play-apron. From a square of unbleached muslin or cotton, cut the top point as shown by the shaded part. Bind the edges with bias strips of plaid or striped gingham. Applique the simple design made of plain colored gingham. Place a ribbon at the top to keep the apron in place about the neck. Place at each side at the waistline, a row of ribbon ends for tying. This square play-apron makes a sweet gift for a child.

Adventures With a Purse

LET me tell you about the little shop. It will prove a veritable haven of refuge for the last-minute Christmas shopping, for it is chock full of most fascinating and irresistible novelties. Whether you seek a little remembrance for Cousin Kate or a costly gift for Uncle Stephen, you can find in this delightful and tiny shop. I could tell you of queer cigar boxes, hand painted and lacquered; of clinging negligees, of artistic phone slides—my word, it would be impossible for me to list the things! And listing them, anyhow, does not describe their charm. So just drop in and browse among the pretties for yourself. You'll have a lovely time.

I am not a follower of Confucius. I know little about Buddhism. I know less about Buddhas. And I am not even definitely certain that that of which I write is a Buddha. But this much I do know, and that is that at a shop I can tell you of there may be purchased a little gilded idol which I take to be a Buddha. Anyhow, it is uncommonly attractive. It sits on a small flat stand, and underneath it goes the sweet-scented incense that sends such an elusive yet pungent fragrance through the room. For its price, $2, I have seen few incense burners to compare with it.

There is the woman who has everything, and to whom you want to send a little remembrance—something unusual more than a card, yet not an expensive gift—all of which presents a by no means small problem. How would this do? I know of a shop that has nicely boxed stuffed tigs, or dates, or prunes, or apricots. I have had the dates myself—they cost $1—and I can say frankly that they are delicious. The apricots, too, look ever so good, priced at $1.50. Now there is something that probably no one else would ever think of.

At Breakfast

To predict the weather for the evening, look at your coffee in the morning and if bubbles rise after the sugar is put in, and stay in the center of the cup, will be fat—but if they go to the side, it will rain soon.

Friday Ends Your Opportunity

—to share in the 20% cash discount on every purchase you make in the William H. Wanamaker Store, whether it be in men's furnishings, hats or men's suits and overcoats.

CHRISTMAS givers are availing themselves of these savings by the hundreds.

NOTE THE EXCEPTION

We have brought together our fur collar overcoats to sell them as Christmas gifts without regard to their cost to us.

$100 For our regular $175 fur collar overcoats.

$75 For our regular $125 fur collar overcoats.

The collars are of beaver, otter, nutria and opossum.

Sizes range from 35 to 42.

The fabrics are the finest purchased abroad—O'Brien overcoatings.
