Nancy Wynne Speaks of the Joy and Excitement of Christmas-She Sorrows Over the Deaths of Mr. J. Percy Keating and Mrs. James Lowell, Boston

WELL, have you bought everything and have you nearly died of excite-ment, seeing your own presents arrive, and yet controlled your excitement and how opened said presents? Or have you opened them all up and pretend-then wrapped them all up and pretend-ed that you haven't an idea what they are? And have you even got some letters written already to thank people and mail them on Christmas Day just as if you hadn't opened the things before, it all? I know you. It really is more fun to keep them, is t it? But them some of us can't, and, after all, the best way to enjoy things is to enjoy them the way we like. And if that isn't a sentence, I
