MR. A. L. ERLANGER PRESENTS GILBERT MILLER'S LONDON PRODUCTION OF THE ANDRE MESSAGER-BOOTH TARKINGTON ROMANTIC OPERA

THE PLAYGOER'S

On Monday night there will be "Monsieur Beaucaire," the charming operetta that Andre Messager based on Booth Tarkington's "period" novel; "Aphrodite," the elaborately spectacular drama made out of Pierre Louys' French novel of the same name, from which was derived also a French play and Erianger's opera, and "Shavings," a stage version of "Joe" Lincoln's whimsical Cape Cod story. It is interesting to note that all of next week's new stage attractions are derivatives, and in each case from sources that have had carrier success in their original form as well as lengthy engagements elsewhere as theatrical enterprises.

MESSAGER, whose operetta will be produced at the Forrest, is a noted French composer and conductor, whose American tour last year as director of the Paris Conservatoire Orchestra will be remembered by music lovers. He is also the composer of "Veronique," a delightful light opera, presented in this country more than a decade ago and revived with much success lars season in Paris. His grand opera, "Madame Chrysantheme," with libretto from Pierre Loti's story, was also produced both in Chicago and New York, but did not win permanent place in the reperfory, possibly on account of the great popularity of the Puccini-David Belasco-John Luther Long "Madame Butterity," on a somewhat smillar Japanese theme. The idea of "operaizing" "Reaucaire" originated with Gilbert Miller, son of Henry Miller, and now one of the most successful producers in London. The story, by Booth Tarkingson, written over twenty years ago, when the now successful novelite and playwriped just been graduated from Princeton, was as widely read in England as in America, its sales ran into bundreds of thousands of copies. Who does not remember the romance of the cousin of the French king, who, to avoid an unwelcome marriage, escapes to England disguised as a barber, and at the famous watering place, Bath, falls in love with the beautiful Lady Mary, wins her heart, unmasks, "cheats" at cards, fants duels and in the end goes back to France to espouse his first love. In play form it was a Mansfield success.

A master of the classic form of opera-comfique, M. Messager has long been an informational figure. Frederick Lons-dale is the librettist and Adrian Ross the lyricist. The title role was assumed during both the long London and New York runs by Marien Green, formerly a Chicago oratorio and concert baritone, and he will sing it here, supported by the oroginal cast.

"A PHRODITE" will put on the big A Shubert stage, upon a massive scale and with gorgeous coloring one of the most celebrated remances known to modern fiction. The original story by Pierre Louys, a Frenchman, was a sensation. Various versions in English, much toned, have been printed, but the story remained chiefly in libraries until Pierre Frondale made the dramatic version which was such a sensation in Paris that Mary Garden afterward appeared in it in the grand opera adaptation, with music by Camille Erlanger. Then George C. Haxleton was engaged by Morris Gest, who bought the American rights, to adapt the play for the American stage. It was produced last December in New York and was a big theatrical sensation on account of its elaborate staging. Virtually the original company and all the mammeth production consisting of ten stage pictures of splandor, will be brought to Philadelphia

"Aphrodite" is partly historical and partly fiction. The two historical characters are Demetrios, a sculptor, whose mutiliated statue of Aphrodite still is exhibited as one of the prizes of the Louvre in Parls, and Berenike, queen of Egypt at the period of the novel, 89 B. C. Demetrios is loved by Berenike, but he repulses her advances because of his ideal love for his statue of Aphrodite. Lacoln's novel by Pauline Phelps and Marien Short. The scenes are on Cape Cod and the quaint and humorous characters which Mr. Lincoln created for the book appear on the stake. The company is hended by Harry Beresford.

The story centers about Jed Winslow maker of toy ships and windmills. His occentricities and years of self-dewal have turned him into what his fell w townspeonle regard as a crank. Jed, however, has many lovable characteristics, which endear him to his friends, and love comes to him as he is surrounded by his toys in the Cape Cod shop. Jed's romance develops an unsuspected maniness in the toymaker, who had been looked upon with amusement and tolerance, tempering the humorous angles of the plot with a note of pathos.

IRELAND IN KEITH PLAYLET 'BEAUCAIRE' PERIOD GOWNS

ting to World-Wide Superstition

The superstition about the new moon is almost international, but in Ireland apparently it helds first place; and so Edgar Allan Woolf, who has written several successul short plays, has made ireland the scene of its activity in his one-act play "The New Moon," which will be presented at Keith's next week. The star of this new vehicle is Hermine Shone, who is one of the ingenue typp of leading woman. She possesses the wistfulness which Maude Adams had as a characteristic, and it fits into the role in this romantic comedy.

"The New Moon" is one of few sketches with scenes in Ireland that have been presented in vaudeville. Miss Shone is supported by a company of four. Attractive musical numbers have been especially written for the piece.

"Funniest Face in the World"

James Bradbury, the veteran comedian who scores in "Shavings," was said by Dr. Frank Crane to possess "the funniest face in the world." But this means facial expressions.

Mr. Bradbury uses a big assortment of different and distinct expressions during his performance of Cap'n Sam. ting to World-Wide Superstition
