The limping limerick prize which will be announced tomorrow is being awarded by a jury of girl employes of the S. S. White dental goods manufacturing concern, Twelfth street below Walnut. A photograph of the jury will be printed on the back name. on the back page.

Here's another limpin' lim'rick winmer who jokingly promised to give the whole prize away if he won. And, like the rest, he's got to make good, and it serves him right.

Oughtn't to joke about anything serious as a lim'rick.

And the best of this case is that the chap who benefits most is the little eleven-year-old son of the winner. He gets a bicycle out of it. His father actually was so sceptical of his chances of winning that he promised the boy a wheel for an idea the lad gave him. The consequence is that the prize is to be divided among the son, three other children and the wife. The winner will have the glory. That doesn't strike us as much consolation after seeing ONE HUNDRED cold, hard Uncle Sam dollars slip through your fingers.

But we've warned all you fans several times about making these rush promises, and if your sense of humor this gets the better of you that way, you should mustn't blame us. The winner today, Mr. who sets this mournful example, is:
