THE DAILY NOVELETTE

Talk About Nerve!

By HAZEL GRAY WOOD Now just tell me all about it dear, from beginning to end," begged Sue, actiling herself comfortably on the thickly cushloned divan in Sally's room and helping herself generously to the sugared almonds. "Here I come home to find your father defeated for governor after holding the office for years and to hear that you are engaged to be married." Fire away and I'll listen!"

"But to begin at a proper beginning, you know, Sue, that mother's nervessare simply a wreck, and when it came around election time and the papers began to hint of a scandal to be uncarthed and the younger contingent wanting a different man, and Dad saw there was going to be a sure enough fight on, he simply instated that mother go away until it was all over And, naturally although I was fearfully proved about it. I had to play the dutiful daughter and trot along, too:

"Now, it wouldn't have been so bad if mother hadn't pleked out a dull little hole in the mountains to go to. Of course, poor slear, she souldn't stand a regular jazzy resort, and considering how it turned out—but you'll see. Anyway, we went to a place whete all you hear after 8 o'clock is the whippoorwills and the clerk blowing out the lamps, Believs me. spent a fair amount of her time in taking, developing and finishing pictures purely for her own amusement. When the Streeter estate was settled upon the hobby which she had followed for many years, particularly as she had had to sell some of her pictures in order to raise immediate funds. The demand for the photographs showed that there was an active market for them, but, instead of opening a "studio" of her own, and running into debt while she waited for people to come to her. Mrs. Streeter started right in to do a little intensive selling.
