

TEXAS STIRRED UP AGAINST JAPANESE

American Legion Posts Oppose Colonization by Orientals From California

EXCLUSION LAW IS SOUGHT

By the Associated Press. Brownsville, Tex., Jan. 7.—Development was awaited today in the situation created yesterday by the arrival at Harlingen, Tex., yesterday of two Japanese families bringing agricultural implements and who proposed to settle on a 282-acre tract of land near Harlingen.

Anti-Japanese feeling at Harlingen is described as intense. The Japanese have been worried by a committee of citizens and American Legion posts that it would be dangerous for them to settle on the land.

The Japanese, who are brothers, are at the Harlingen Hotel, awaiting replies from S. Kishi, who they believe sold them the land for the account of Z. Yamato, of Los Angeles. A committee of citizens are meeting all trains looking members and for Kishi and other Japanese. The brothers said they paid $273 an acre for the land they intended to occupy and had no intention that there was anti-Japanese feeling in the Rio Grande valley.

American legionaries in other valley towns are keeping in touch with the situation by telephone, it is said.

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 7.—By A. P.—An anti-Japanese land ownership bill, similar in effect to the alien-exclusion laws of California, will be presented to the Texas Legislature probably during the session which opens Tuesday, by the state executive committee of the American Legion posts of Texas, according to an announcement by Herbert Peters, commander of Alamo Post.

Peters declared that reports from Harlingen showed considerable anti-

TO CONFER ON REPARATIONS

German Experts Will Meet Allies in Brussels January 25

Paris, Jan. 7.—(By A. P.) The German Government today informed the allied governments that the German experts would be ready to resume the reparations conference at Brussels with the Allies January 25.

The date for the resumption of talks between the German and the Allies was originally set for January 10, but Germany gave notice early this week that her representatives would not be able to be in Brussels on that date.

FIRE DRILL EFFECTIVE

100 Pupils March Unscathed From Burning Schoolhouse

Reading, Jan. 7.—The 100 pupils in the Normal School, a few miles south of this city, walked to safety yesterday while flames raged on the roof of the building. The fire was caused by an overturned stovepipe. It was burning briskly when Albert Orr, a grammar school teacher, noticed the smoke and gave the alarm for the fire drill.

While the flames were spreading the pupils calmly marched out of school to a nearby field.

BRIGHTER DAY BREAKS OVER SEVEN SMALL RUSSIAN WAIFS

Admiral McCully's Wards Express Their Delight in Words No One Can Understand and Intelligible Smiles

Washington, Jan. 7.—There was a great splutter of words and clamor of voices at the Children's Hospital today, but it would take a Cossack to understand them.

Rear Admiral Newton A. McCully's seven Russian wards reached Washington at 7:30 o'clock. They were taken to the hospital in two taxicabs and tucked in between clean sheets. This was their first day in the capital, and they spent the day in playing and resting.

Not one of them can speak English, but they have a means of communication common to children everywhere. Their smiles are all we can understand, said Miss Mattie M. Gibson, superintendent of the hospital, who has assumed personal charge of the young waifs.

THIEF ESCAPES WOMAN

Man Who Robbed House Described as Good-Looking

When Mrs. Minnie Macbeth returned to her home, 3929 Memphis street, from a shopping tour yesterday afternoon, she saw a young man on the front porch. "What are you doing there?" demanded Mrs. Macbeth, as she approached the house.

Without making any reply, the man fled up Memphis street and over a four-foot wall. Mrs. Macbeth followed, shouting. A crowd joined in the chase, but the man escaped.

An investigation of the house showed jewelry valued at $200 had been stolen. Evidence was gained by forcing a window. Mrs. Macbeth described the man as being rather good looking and wearing a sport coat.

THE BEETHOVEN RECITAL

Mme. Samaroff Plays Third Period Sonata and Mr. Stokowski Explains Fugue Form

At last evening's Beethoven piano recital Mme. Samaroff performed two of the five sonatas which form the closing group of Beethoven's compositions in this form. It was the first appearance of any of the "third period" sonatas in the series.

The program had been changed from that originally announced, the B flat sonata (number 10) on 106 being transferred to the last recital of the series, in order to allow Mr. Stokowski to talk at some length on fugue form, a device which Beethoven uses to a great extent in the sonata just mentioned as well as in the A flat major.

which was on last evening's program. The program opened with the sonata opus 90, in E minor, which Mr. Stokowski described as a "transitional" work bridging the second and the third periods. The beautiful work, in but two movements and containing some of the loveliest of the thoughts Beethoven put into the sonata form, was well played and the charm of the composition clearly shown by the soloist.

The second number was the A major, op. 101, probably the weakest, if so strong a term may be applied, of the five great works which closed Beethoven's career as a composer of piano sonatas. It is a difficult sonata both to play and to understand. Mme. Samaroff did her part in performance with more distinction than did the audience in understanding the abstract work.

Mr. Stokowski then spoke at some length on the fugue, with especial relation to the architecture of the last movement of the sonata just mentioned as well as in the A flat major.
