Marion, Jan. 15.—It is expected the President-elect Harding will make tentative offer of the secretaryship of war to ex-Senator John W. Week,

who is in Marion today for a conference.

Mr. Weeks, according to the best informed here, is certain to go into the cabinet. He was originally regarded to the likeliest candidate for secretary the treasury. But Mr. Harding desired a western man in that post and Charles G. Dawes, of Chicago, is almost certainly his choice.

Mr. Weeks has been mentioned also for secretary of the navy and his Annapolis education would make him as appropriate appointee to that post. But it is understood that he would prefer not to be secretary of the navy just because of that Annapolis training. The boys who went to school with his in the Naval Academy are now admirals and Mr. Weeks as secretary of the navy would be forced to discriminate among his old friends in making assignments to duty. The task might prove embarrassing for him.

Qualified for Post For the place of secretary of w

the ex-senator is qualified by his service in the military affairs committee of the Senate. He was the ranking Republican member of that committee at the time of the senate. mained in the upper house he would now be chairman of the committee While serving upon it he was active it the investigation of the conduct of the war which brought down the wrath. President Wilson upon the Democrate chairman of the committee, Senate Chamberlain, of Oregon.

He has thus more familiarity wit the War Department than any one else that Mr. Harding would be likely to find for secretary of war. He has moreover, another qualification which moreover, another qualification which Mr. Harding greatly desires in his see retary of war, namely, large busines experience. Up to his retirement from the firm of Hornblower & Weeks is was a successful business man. He has both a practical and theoretical knowledge of banking, being perhaps the most conspicuous example of the business man in politics in this countries. ness man in politics in this con today. The post of secretary of war is high important because Mr. Harding will moure the judgment of a capable bas ness man who will not be dominated by the professional soldiers to the exten Secretary Baker has been when it come to working out a disarmament progra in conjunction with other nations.
