

GORE SEES NATION UNIT FOR HARDING

Oklahoma's Blind Senator, Visiting City, Says President-Elect Is Fortunate

NATIONS CANNOT DISARM

President-elect Harding goes into office with the whole-hearted support of the entire American people, according to Thomas P. Gore, the blind senator from Oklahoma. "And I have known an American President who has not gone into office just that way," he added.

Senator Gore, who was at the Bellevue-Stratford today, following an address in this city last night, discussed the national situation. So far as the present session of Congress is concerned, he said, nothing much will be done, the only bills to be passed being the "bread and butter bills." But the legislators and statesmen at the national capital, he said, are thinking deeply over the problems that must be faced when the new President assumes office.

Disarmament Dream

"Now," he said, "take the matter of disarmament. That is something everybody prays for, but nobody expects. It is a very hard thing to accomplish, for every nation bows politely and says, 'After you.' I voted for a smaller army myself, because I take the stand we have 2,000,000 trained soldiers in this country now, with the proper complement of trained officers, and 2,000,000 partly trained. So a large army is not really necessary. It is also suggested we reduce the number of regular army officers. That, of course, would remove from the service a number of the officers newly appointed from the reserve corps and from civil life. I have not seen the estimate personally, but I know it is planned to have some dropped."

"As for immigration, we are between the devil and the deep blue sea. I fully agree we ought to restrict it further.

But we should begin the sifting process on the other side of the ocean. It is not fair to either the immigrant or the shipping company to wait until the immigrant arrives here before he is carefully examined, only to be in many cases deported.

"We should raise the standard of those who come here. I know there are many backed up behind the dam over there, all ready to come. Immigration, however, acts as a sort of labor supply. If you watch the statistics, you see they flow into the country and flow out again, at the barometer of trade and business rises or falls.

Immigration a Balance

"I am a friend of organized labor. But I realize that if anybody becomes enthroned as a monopoly, as master of the situation, whoever he may be, he is inclined to go too strongly. Therefore I believe in immigration as a sort of balance against that sort of thing, but it should always be kept a haven for people who want to escape from tyranny."

"Then there is the Mexican situation. That, I believe, is going to be ironed out on a basis of justice and respect for American property rights. Americans went into that country, subject to its laws, and their property ought not be subject to confiscation.

"Taxes are the biggest problem we are facing just now. I always contended we should have paid for the war out of the profits of the war, in other words, taxes should have been highest during the war and lower after. Now the reverse is the case. The interest on our debt is $1,000,000,000, and that cannot be raised by a tariff. Increase the tariff, decrease the revenue. Our exports are so much greater than our imports that the rate of exchange is hit. Raise the tariff, lower the imports, in consequence, and hurt the rate of exchange still further; the remedy would be worse than the disease. Conditions are different now that at any other time a tariff bill has ever been framed."

To Deport Stowaway

Despite the fact that he had resided in North Carolina for fifteen years, Paul Phillips, twenty-one years old, was ordered deported by the Department of Immigration at Washington yesterday. Phillips has been held at the detention house, Gloucester, since the arrival of the St. Anthony, a year ago Phillips and his father, left North Carolina to visit the father's mother in Greece. The father returned as a passenger, while the son took his chances as a stowaway.

80 MURDER TRIALS LISTED IN 2 COURTS

Six More Await Rotan's Action. Tribunals to Concentrate on Cases

MURDERERS' ROW CROWDED

Eighty persons accused of murder are listed for trial here and six more will soon be listed at the office of the district attorney.

Beginning Monday next, two courts will concentrate on the murder cases, and an effort will be made to clear the cells along "murderers' row" at Moyamensing prison.

So many are the murder cases that the district attorney's office, the city detective force and the county detective force have been working night and day trying to catch up with the boards clean and concentrate in the two courts next week on the murder cases alone. The hundreds of banditry and other criminal cases being held over until the murder cases may be disposed of.

This is rendered necessary by the advisability of bringing a murder case to trial as soon after the crime is committed as may be practicable, before witnesses become scattered and memories become dim. Hundreds of witnesses have been subpoenaed.

Of the murder cases, thirty-three of the persons listed for trial are confined at Moyamensing prison, in addition to which are the six cases not yet listed for trial. There are forty-seven more on bail.

Those at Moyamensing

The persons accused of murder who will come up for trial and who are confined at Moyamensing prison follow:

William P. Brines, Henry R. Rick, Antonio Mercurio, Charles Walker, Earl Carter, alias Earl French, William Turner, Albert Trivins, William Feldkeller, Thomas McHale, John R. Murray, John Donohue, James MeLaugh, Eugene Walsh, Leonard Win-student, while McHale is accused of having killed Nicola Oster, who was shot and killed on North College avenue near Twenty-second street June 1 last.

Another man who will be tried on Monday is William R. Rick, who is charged with the murder of Abner Braun, a motorcycle policeman. Following the Rick trial comes that of McHale, also John R. Murray, John Donohue, James MeLaugh and Eugene Walsh.

Court No. 1, in Room 453, will be presided over by Judge McCallen, the prosecuting attorneys in that court to be Assistant District Attorneys Brown and Speyer. Judge Ferguson will preside over Court No. 2, in Room 653.

The Hindu Princess Whose Heart Was Broken

She was sixteen years old, the daughter of an Indian Prince, and she had never before been outside her father's house alone. Yet—

Here she was, dressed in her brother's clothes, among the mango trees, wiping with her soft, dark hand, the feet of the man she loved who lay desperately wounded. And when he recovered consciousness he struck her in the face!

"Daughter of a traitor!" he cried, "Infidel! At the very hour of my death you have desecrated my whole life!"

But, after all, he didn't die of his wounds and she didn't die—she lived with a broken heart! Read this story in the February
