

WOMAN REGRETS LOVE LAWSUIT NOW

Laura Heller, Back in Cigar Factory, Accepts $100 Balm Verdict, However

WILL JUST PUT IT IN BANK

Clad in a big black rubber apron, Laura Heller, of Quakerstown, plaintiff in the $10,000 breach of promise suit, left her table in Grausey's cigar factory today and talked a little about the verdict that a little while before had given her $100 and costs, as a recompense for twenty years of devotion to Erwin Hillegas.

"Yes, I received the money," said Miss Heller. "One hundred dollars isn't very much, is it? And a pathetic smile crossed her face.

"I can't say what I think of it, or what I expected. I don't know anything about law cases, and I had never been in court before. Some of my friends made guesses as to what the amount would be, but I didn't know if it would be more than $10,000 or less."

"Silly she entered suit. One thing is sure: Had I known the humiliations I was to suffer and the embarrassments it would mean, I'd never have started proceedings. My friends are to blame for it; they urged me to enter suit. They meant it as a kindness, though; not to make me suffer more."

"No, I haven't cried, only once; and I guess that was more from anger than because I was hurt."

"What will I do with the $100? Put it in bank, I guess. If there is any left after I pay my lawyer."

"I don't make much money, and only today we were told of a cut in our wages. This will make a difference of $3 on every thousand cigars we make."

"I came to work today because my counsel advised it. He thought my mind would be less occupied with the case, I guess he was right."

Efforts were first made to see Miss Heller at her home, 1216 Broad street, and there it was learned that she had gone back to work.

A Drab Atmosphere
The very house bespoke the atmosphere in which this woman has led a drab existence.

With every shutter tightly bowed, and the front entrance held sacred for Sunday usage alone, the expanse of her world has been limited indeed.

Drudgery in these surroundings in the early morning, and then a long walk to the cigar factory to sit at a table until dark has been Miss Heller's daytime for twenty years.

Night always meant the one gleam of light in her life. Night brought Erwin Hillegas, brought him for twenty years, and then brought him no more.

This is the woman who was fearful to see an intruder at the factory, because "it might be Erv."

"I didn't know why he might come here, but I thought maybe it was Erv. Do you think he will bring the $100?" Miss Heller asked, "because I don't want to see him," she added with finality.

"I've lived here all my life, and expect to stay here. I'm not ashamed of my part in this affair, but maybe Erv will want to move."

Several times Miss Heller insisted that it wasn't the money she wanted so much as the vindication, expressed rather crudely by, "Well I showed him up, didn't I."

TO TELL GERMAN SECRETS

James Brown Scott Will Speak at Academy Forum Meeting

Secrets of the escape of the former German Emperor William from trial will be told tonight by James Brown Scott, chief legal adviser of the American Peace Commission, at the Public Ledger Forum on the Peace Conference. The meeting is in the foyer of the Academy of Music.

Mr. Scott will tell who were in favor of punishing the former German emperor at Versailles, and why; and also who were not in favor of such a procedure, and the reasons. He will discuss the American viewpoint on the much-mooted question and will explain why the Japanese delegates sided with the representatives of the United States.

The speaker will make clear why the Netherlands Government could not deliver the kaiser, and cannot do so now. He will tell of the desire of the Allies to punish the German generals who violated the rules of "civilized warfare"; of the tight corner in which the Allies found themselves when they made ready to fulfill that desire, and of their relief when they were able to leave the punishment of those officers to the German Government.

PURSUER NEAR FATAL FALL

Detective Rolls to Edge of Roof, Then Saves Self

A city detective nearly fell from a roof on Tenth street near Buttonwood early today while chasing Jesse Murphy, a Negro, accused of firing several shots at the bedroom window of Mary Wade, colored, 441 North Tenth street.

Murphy, who was caught after a struggle, is said to have opened fire from the sidewalk as the woman looked from the window. Police say he had asked her to marry him and she refused.

McCarthy, a district detective of the Tenth and Buttonwood streets station, and several other detectives, were chasing Murphy, who led to the roof of 420 North Tenth street, his home. McCarthy slipped and rolled to the edge of the roof, but clutched a rainspout. His comrades pulled him to safety.

URGES SOUTH PHILA. AS WORLD FAIR SITE

Architect Tells Clover Club Diners Broad Street Would Be Ideal Archway of Triumph

OPPOSES PAUL CRET PLAN

South Philadelphia was proposed as the ideal location for a world's fair here in 1920 by Joseph Huston, architect. In speaking last night at the Clover Club dinner in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. Mr. Huston opposes the Paul Cret plan of having the event along the Parkway and in Fairmount Park, on the basis that boulevards of the park will be much endangered. Mr. Huston likewise proposes that lower Broad street be made an immense archway of triumph, and that in the scheme of erection of buildings on the lowlands of South Philadelphia the architectural lines embody the hanging gardens of Babylon, the pyramids of Egypt and a music hall in replica of St. Peter's in Rome. The Delaware river would be used for gathering of the fleets of the world and for aquatic events. Other speakers at the dinner were Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., retired; Lieutenant Colonel Sherman Miles, his son; Samuel H. Vancisin, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works; the Rev. Dr. Thomas A. Davis, originator of the Cheer-Up Club; John Higley, Arthur Eaton and Clement Congdon.
