

READING CHORUS SCORES IN GOUNOD'S "REDEMPTION"

Society, Directed by A. Lindsay Vorden and Assisted by Philadelphia Orchestra Members, Makes Remarkable Impression—Soloists Sing Excellently

Reading, Jan. 25.—The Reading Chorus Society, under the direction of A. Lindsay Vorden, has given a most successful performance of Gounod's "Redemption" at the Reading High School. The chorus, consisting of 40 members, was ably assisted by the Philadelphia Orchestra. The performance was a masterpiece of vocal and instrumental art.

TODAY'S MYSTERY STORY

By PHILIP FRANCIS NOWLAN

Yesterday's Mystery Solution IN THE case of "Where Reason Failed," Professor Dittmann had planned an almost perfect crime.

But his reason was caught napping in the instant of a professional "rim" and would not have been, when he came to register at the hotel as O'Brien.

An elephant can pick up a pin

But no dressmaking establishment can afford to have an elephant to keep the pins off the floor.

A twenty-four inch belt could be used to transmit the power which a twenty-inch belt transmits with efficiency—but that would be too much like hiring elephants to pick up pins.

There is a graver element in belt transmission. It is giving an elephant's job to a belt too weak to stand it.

Here is the whole secret of efficient belt transmission: Get the right kind, size and width of belt for the job and run it at the proper tension.

We have all kinds and sizes of leather belt for all drives and conditions of service—giant belts for main drives, or small round 1/4 in. belts for sewing machines.
