ANNIE GRAY BALKS AT DEPORTATION

Notorious Woman, Pardon by President, Hires Lawyer After Her Rearrest

GUARDS DAUGHTER'S NAME

An appeal to the United States Supreme Court will be made to save Annie Gray, a notorious woman of this city from deportation to Russia, February 21.

The woman, whose prison term was out short recently by a pardon from President Wilson, engaged counsel today. She is a prisoner at the detention house of the Gloucester immigration station.

Annie Gray, who is said to have escaped punishment for years as a keeper of disorderly houses, was arrested at Eighth and Wood streets last night on a deportation order.

The woman today doggedly refused to reveal the identity of an eighteen-year-old daughter who is said to have been rearrested in New York on a deportation order.

The daughter is reported to be an accomplished pianist.

Out to Make Arrest

Yesterday James L. Hughes, commissioner of immigration at Gloucester, sent A. G. Benkhardt, an inspector to Philadelphia, to investigate the woman Benkhardt went to police headquarters and Detective Walsh of the vice squad was assigned to go with him to identify the woman.

The two men started for the woman's home on Callowhill street near Ninth. At Eighth and Callowhill streets they saw Annie Gray approaching. A man next later they arrested her and started with her for Gloucester.

Commissioner Hughes today explained the procedure in the case. "Shortly after Annie Gray was sentenced to nine months for violation of the selective service act," said the commissioner, "we received a deportation order in her case from the Department of Labor at Washington. The sentence was to expire in May of this year and we were prepared to send her from the country at the expiration of her sentence. We learned that she had been released from jail in December and immediately took up her case with the department to have her deported.

Shielded the Daughter

"Because of representations made to the department by her counsel, the woman was allowed a reasonable time in which to wind up her affairs, dispose of her property and prepare for deportation. The statement was made that she wished to keep in knowledge of her mother, who is a woman ignorant of the real mother's character or business. The two had a home far from where the elder woman operated and there Annie Gray used another name.

Ten days ago we looked up the woman's case, and feeling that she had not had a reasonable time in which to prepare for deportation we asked Washington for the authority to deport her. We were then told to pick her up, and if it had not been for the lack of accommodations she would have gone with the group of Communists who were deported recently.

"We have been preparing passports and the other papers necessary for her deportation, and yesterday Inspector Benkhardt went out and arrested her. We have arranged to send her away on a ship that leaves this country February 24."

SCHOOLGIRL SCORNS MORE BOOKS AND GETS HUSBAND

Margaret Mar Elopes After Father Balks One Effort to Marry Immediately After Her Graduation Exercises

Miss Margaret Mar was graduated last Friday from the Philadelphia High School for girls and her home, at 1432 North Fifth street, ostensibly to attend a banquet, which in the city, but went instead to Baltimore.

Miss Mar's father, Edward Mar, a well-known contractor, who has been married to her mother, Mrs. Mar, for many years, was in the city when she returned.

Following the commencement she was to have attended a luncheon at the Adelphi Hotel. She did not attend the luncheon, but went with her mother, Mrs. Mar, to the marriage home at City Hall.

"Go to school," said Dad. The girl's father, Edward Mar, earned of the house. He hurried to City Hall and presented the issuance of the license. Dulce returned disappointed to her father's home.

To all intents, Miss Mar acquiesced to her father's plan. Shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday morning she left her home to enter the marriage home.

Her mother is in New York.

When Mr. Mar returned to his home last evening, he became alarmed because his daughter had not yet returned.

At 10 o'clock he received a brief telegram announcing she had gone to Baltimore instead of school, and that she had been married there.

With her husband she then proceeded to Cambridge.

Mr. Mar opposed his daughter's marriage because of her youth. Mr. Duke is twenty-five.

Ready to Say, "Bless You!"

"Will the marriage result in an estrangement between you and your daughter?" Mr. Mar was asked.

"Oh, my no!" he replied, emphatically. "You know she's still my daughter, and I don't think it's very hard to forgive her."
