TEMPTING COLD SAUCES DESCRIBED BY MRS. WILSON

Evaporated Milk a Successful Substitute for Yolk of Egg in Mayonnaise—This Dressing Is Foundation for

Remoulade, Tartar and Caledonian Sauces

These sauces are used to serve with cold meats, poultry, sea foods and fish.

Mayonnaise

It is no longer necessary to depend upon the yolk of egg to make this dressing. While delving into chemistry I found that the homogenized fat of radish evaporated milk will congulate with oil as readily as the fut in the yolk of egg and much more rapidly without the least chance of separating, and that when separation did occur the mix-ture was easily returned to a smooth consistency by the addition of a table-Surely this is a great stride in the science of preparing this splendid sauce. The housewife is no longer at the mercy of the dillettante hen. Senson es not prevent. She may have this delicious dressing with equal abundance during the winter when eggs are scarce as during the spring and summer. The coy hen today is at a discount, as far as mayonnaise is concerned. How to proceed :

Place four tablespoons of evaporated milk in a deep dish and add

One-half traspoon of yellow mustard. One-quarter traspoon of paprika. Dissolve the spices in milk and when thoroughly blended add one teaspoon of vinegar or lemon juice and immediately begin to add the oil very slowly. Bent with a fork until quite thick. This amount of milk will take about two-.

thirds cup of oil. Add One additional leaspoon of vincate.

One tenspoon of powdered sugar. One tenspoon of salt.

One-quarter teaspoon of white pepper. One-quarter teaspoon at grated
