THE DAILY NOVELETTE Sir Galahad's Ears

By ALICIA PRESTON He found her kneeling on a white bear skin before the hearth, the frelight gleaming over the rosy satin of her gown, making her hair dusky with shadows and her eyes a dance with fames, and cascading from hea lap, strewn about the floor, everywhere were lutters, square of paper, ribbons, enve-

With a quick movement she tossed the one she was reading into the fire-place before she waved a welcome to place before she waved a welcome to imi:

"Gracious, Billy, how early you are;"

"Yes, but I thought we could talk before the dance. You look —say, Pris," he challenged, "you look like a valentine and tonight I'm in the mood to say.—may I be your—"

"Are you? Well, don't say it!" interposed Priscilla hastily. "It's not my mood at all. I'm cleaning house—I'm hurning love letters."

Billy recovered quickly. He was used rebuffs from Priscilla. This was his weight attempted proposal to her and it legan to seem more natural to consider its as a "pal" than as a fiances.

"Let me help," he picked up an envelope. "Oh, I say, Pris! This is mine! Let's not burn this!"

All right, you can have it. " she leased. "Silly hoy! It is beautiful, but itell you I'm house-cleaning!"

"Pris, are you in love with any one could burn in the say."

"No, indeedy, that's why I'm burning each tip. Want to hindle this for me? to the white birchwood. It's more romantic.

You, romantic!" he aniffed as he obayed. You haven't even a heart!"

You've told me eleven times that I had yours. Here, put that down, sir!"

Billy stared suspiciously at a blue-ribboned packet he had started to toss she confessed. "He had black hair and red checks and twinkly eyes, but such a holy Grail sort of look just the same. We went through grammar school together. Then his minister father became a missionary and they moved to the Philippines. I haven't seen him since—not for ten years. We never corresponded. There are notes written in school, invitations and things. They're so different from the others." She seemed trying to justify herself to him. "Ill bet it's because of Sir Galahad that you freat the rest of us so," hazarded Billy.

"Oh—well. I sometimes wonder my—welf," the girl admitted, "but more like-Poor Billy," she soothed him. It does sound assinine, but just now I can't think of anything else distinctive shout him. Let's go on to the dance. It was during the first dance that Billy said suddenly:

"Well, I suppose I could practice."

"Fractice what?"

"Sir Galahad's parior trick."

Tractice what? Or Galahad's partor trick." Billy Martin! Don't you dare o

To Use Worn Blankets

When blankets, either cotton or woolen, become thin and threadbare, they make a fine interlining for comforcables. When pieces are used, lap his edges and baste together so that the edges will not curl up inside. Cover, line and knot the same as any other convfortable. Old worsted skirts can be used in the same way. Rip the skirt, reverse every other gore, lap the edges and baste together. Silkatene is very good for tring off with, as it passes through the material more easily than her.—GOOD HOUSEKEEPING.
