DR. GRAMMER HITS WASTE BY CHURCH

Upholds Bishop Fiske in Criticism of Episcopal Budget for Year

DRIVES ARE CRITICIZED

The Rev. Dr. Carl E. Grammer, rector of St. Stephen's Church, Tenth street above Chestnut, today commended the action of Bishop Fiske, of central New York, in criticizing the council budget of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Bishop Fiske said of the government of the church, including the presiding bishop and council with its six departments:

"I have been seriously disturbed by the fact the church was entering upon a period of extravagance in administration at the very moment when the demand is for economy in business and production, and when we are facing the absolute necessity of elimination of waste and extravagance, both national and state."

Dr. Grammer, commenting on the action of Bishop Fiske, said today:

"The question raised by Bishop Fiske is a very important one. At this time, when the resources of the world are taxed to feed starving millions of Europe and Asia, many people are questioning the advisability of many of the expenditures of the church's budget.

"While I honor the zeal of those leaders in New York, the nation-wide campaign has not seemed to me wisely conceived. The real task of the church is a readjustment of its life to modern needs.

"Its reliance ought to be on the truth and helpfulness of its message and not on the power of organization. It is noteworthy that the leaders in these money drives never bring the church's conscience to bear on civic corruption.

"Bishop Fiske has rendered a service by opening up the whole question for a thorough discussion. The history of the Interchurch World Movement shows that overhead expenses have a way of increasing out of all proportion unless there is constant vigilance.

One expenditure by the Episcopal council to which objection was voiced by the city is that of $210,000 annually by the department of publicity.

ILLNESS MAY SAVE HIM

War Veteran's Deportation Held Up by State Department

The State Department virtually agreed today that Alfredo Nanni ought to be given a chance for his life in America—a chance to defeat the white plague.

The bureau of immigration in Gloucester was notified by the State Department not to deport the twenty-four-year old war veteran and to reopen his case. In turn three sisters and a brother who have fought to keep Alfredo Nanni in America were told the good news by their attorney.

At the outbreak of the war Nanni fled here in Philadelphia for three years. He went back to Italy and enlisted in the army. Twice during the war he became sick. The end of hostilities found him apparently in good health and he returned to Philadelphia. Not long ago he was again ill and physicians at the Philadelphia General Hospital declared he has pulmonary tuberculosis. They said under the law he has no right to be allowed in this country, and should be deported. Orders were issued and the sisters and brother began a fight to keep him here. They live in 610 Annis street.

STATE POLICE RAID HOTEL

Arrest Proprietors and Two Women Charged With Selling Liquor

Allentown, Pa., Feb. 14.—The Dauberts Quarry Hotel, two miles west of Nazareth, was raided last night by seven state policemen, who arrested the proprietors, John and James Cohen; a woman said to be the wife of James Cohen, and another said to be his daughter. Two cases of whisky were seized.

As the police entered the hotel the patrons, many of them from Allentown, Bethlehem, Easton and Nazareth, made nasty exits. Many fled in automobiles. Wednesday and Saturday evening parties at the hotel were common since December.

The raid was considered the first step to break the Lehigh Valley liquor ring. The breaking of the ring, it is said, may implicate some officials.

The defendants were committed to jail for a hearing.

TO SHIELD NO ONE IN ERIE VICE PROBE

"I Intend to Go the Limit," Asserts Special Attorney as Grand Jury Meets

Special Dispatch to Evening Public Ledger

Erie, Pa., Feb. 14.—"No one will be protected. I will submit every bit of evidence to the grand jury that it has been possible to gather; I intend to go the limit."

This was the statement made today by Samuel L. Gilson, special district attorney appointed by the court to conduct the investigation into the Erie vice and crime situation, which opens at 2 o'clock this afternoon, in the grand jury room.

Those who know Samuel L. Gilson realize that when he makes this statement he intends to do exactly what he says; that he is going to use every means within his power to bring from the grand jury room indictments against those whom are held as responsible for conditions here. It is estimated this morning that at least sixty witnesses will be called before the grand jury.

Some of these are police officers, others are young girls who have been picked up in the tenderloin of Erie by the state police, working under the direction of Attorney Gilson.

It is said that the stories to be told the members of the grand jury by these young girls would melt a heart of stone. The names of influential citizens are reported to be linked with these stories.

This entire dirty mess is to be aired behind the doors of the jury room, and sitting on that jury are six women, most of them mothers. When Special Prosecutor Gilson begins his probe before the grand jury this afternoon at the same hour District Attorney C. Arthur Blass will begin selecting a jury in the court of Over and Terminer, before Judge C. P. Rossiter, to try Herschell Brescnalfield, charged with the murder of Police Magistrate Fred F. Moran in the Negro house of ill fame conducted by Cleo Quinn, at 15 West Seventeenth street.

The killing occurred early on the morning of January 06, and it was this killing that brought to a head the critical vice situation, and awoke the decent citizens of Erie to the conditions that have existed here for the last five years.

PLAN TESTIMONIAL TO CARDINAL-ELECT

Eight Hundred Catholic Clergy Prepare Archbishop Dougherty's Tribute Today

TO PRAY FOR SAFE VOYAGE

More than 800 members of the Catholic clergy of Philadelphia and the nine nearby counties plan to offer a testimonial to Cardinal-elect Dennis J. Dougherty this afternoon in the chapel of the Cathedral. Announcement of his coming elevation to the cardinalate was made in the various churches Sunday and special prayers were said for the safe journey of his party to Rome.

The party that will leave with the cardinal-elect Saturday will include the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Michael J. Crane, vicar general of the diocese and rector of the Church of St. Francis de Sales; the Very Rev. Joseph A. Whitaker, S. T. L., chancellor, and the following rectors: The Rev. Michael C. Donovan, of St. Agatha's; the Rev. James Nash, of the Epiphany; the Rev. D. J. Brought, of the Ascension; the Rev. James A. Mullin, of Our Lady of Lourdes; the Rev. John J. Rooney, of St. Gabriel's; the Rev. Fenton J. Fitzpatrick, of St. Malachy's, and the Rev. Joseph A. McCullough, of Holy Cross, Mt. Airy.

Reach France February 28

They will leave on the Holland-American liner Nieuw Amsterdam and are scheduled to arrive in Boulogne-sur-Mer, France, February 28. The party will go directly to Rome.

Cable dispatches Monday declared the Vatican had made it known Cardinal-elect Dougherty was the only American who would be elevated to the cardinalate at the March consistory. Archbishops Mundelein, of Chicago, and Hayes, of New York, probably will receive the red hat soon, it was said, but at a later consistory.

The cardinal-elect will be welcomed in Rome by Monsignor Ceretti, papal undersecretary of state; other prelates, laymen and members of the American colony. It is understood he will occupy the same apartment in the American College that was occupied by Cardinals McCloskey and Farley. The apartment will be vacated by Archbishop Hayes, who is leaving Rome February 22 for Naples, where he will rest a week before returning to America, the dispatches said.

To be Nominated March 3

Archbishop Dougherty will be nominated a prince of the church at the secret consistory March 3 and will receive the red hat at the hands of Pope Benedict XV at the public consistory March 7. At the same time he will be notified of his titular church in the Eternal City.

The public consistory will take place in the American College, which is familiar to Philadelphia Catholics on account of its former rector, the late Archbishop Thomas F. Kennedy, a native of Conshohocken, who was named to that post when he was a fellow member of Overbrook Seminary faculty with Archbishop Dougherty, then a young professor.

At the meeting this afternoon in the Cathedral chapel to prepare a testimonial to the cardinal-elect Monsignor Nevin F. Fisher will preside. He is senior vicar general and rector of the Church of Our Mother of Sorrows. It is believed the plans deal with a great demonstration for the new cardinal when he returns here.

DEATH ENDS SAILOR'S TRIP

Succumbs at Naval Y. M. C. A. on Eve of Excursion to New York

Stricken with heart disease, John Geiss, forty years old, a sailor attached to the receiving ship at League Island, was found dead yesterday morning at the Naval Y. M. C. A., Thirteenth and Shunk streets.

Geiss and ten other sailors engaged rooms Saturday night, intending to go to New York yesterday. They were called at 6 o'clock, and every one with the exception of Geiss got up. The others left, thinking that he was asleep. He was found this morning by one of the attendants who was going to clean the room.

Geiss was taken to the Methodist Hospital and there pronounced dead.

PLEA WINS WIFE'S RELEASE

Husband Appeals to Magistrate for Drug Addict

"She's been a faithful wife. Let her off this time, and I'll see that she gets medical attention that will cure her of the drug habit."

This plea by her husband, James Regan, moved Magistrate Harrigan, of the Third and De Lancey streets station, to release Mrs. Florence Regan, thirty years old, of Lydlow street near Fifty-first, today.

The woman was arrested last night in the vicinity of Seventh and Christian streets by Detectives McGarrity and Marconi, who testified she was attempting to buy narcotic drugs.

TO HONOR MRS. STEVENSON

Friends Will Attend Birthday Reception of Distinguished Writer

Many distinguished Philadelphians, friends of Mrs. Cornelius Stevenson, will attend a reception to be given her at the Art Alliance next Friday, on her seventy-fourth birthday anniversary. At that time she will be presented with a bas-relief of herself, done in bronze by Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, prominent physician and sculptor. John Cadwalader will preside, and the presentation speech will be made by Miss Agnes Repplier.

The bas-relief, which will be framed, is twelve inches by eighteen inches, and shows Mrs. Stevenson seated at a desk writing.

Born in Paris, Mrs. Stevenson obtained her early education there, and later lived in Mexico. She is a member of many scientific organizations, has written a number of books and articles, is a member of the Acorn, Civic and other women's clubs, and of the Contemporary Club. She received the academic palm from the French Government as officer d'instruction publique for her work for French war relief, and has been a member of a number of committees on municipal reform.

NEW HEAD FOR GIRLS' HOME

Staff Captain Smith, of St. Paul, Comes to Salvation Army

Staff Captain Bertha Smith, of St. Paul, Minn., has succeeded Brigadier Annie Cowan as superintendent of the Salvation Army Home for Girls and Maternity Hospital, 4515 Lansdowne avenue. Brigadier Cowan was in charge of the institution for twelve years.

The West Philadelphia institution cares for unmarried mothers, providing for mother and babe for a period of three months and then aiding the mother to obtain employment.

Born in Holland, Staff Captain Smith joined the Salvation Army while Commissioner and Mrs. Thomas Estill were conducting Salvation Army work in that country. Later she accompanied Commissioner and Mrs. Estill to Japan and opened the first army hospital in Tokio. Then she came to America and took charge of the Home for Girls in Spokane, Wash., where she remained ten years. Two years ago Staff Captain Smith took charge of the Salvation Army Home for Girls in St. Paul.

"MONKEY WEDDING" HIT

Clergymen Say Ceremony Was Burlesque on Christianity

Philadelphia ministers yesterday denounced the "marriage" ceremony recently performed at Palm Beach in which two men's eyes were the principals. The performance was characterized as a "burlesque on Christian civilization." A Philadelphian, James McVittie, impersonated the "clergyman" at the mock marriage. The parts of bride-maids, ushers and others of the "wedding party" were taken by other members of the social set at Palm Beach.

The Rev. Philip F. Osgood, rector of the Chapel of the Mediator, Fifty-first and Spruce streets, said, when told of it: "To me this flippant treatment of things that ought to be held sacred is evidence of a serious danger confronting society—the danger of making a mockery of what should be regarded only with solemnity. This is one reason why the marriage ceremony is not held as a holy thing."

Have Been Married Fifty-four Years

Valentine's Day comes appropriately enough for Mr. and Mrs. M. Sternberger, 4916 North Warnock street, who celebrate their fifty-fourth wedding anniversary tonight. Both are hale and hearty, and are staunch advocates of married life. Their children and grandchildren will have an informal reception to them at their home.

ST. VALENTINE DAY GIVES CUPID SWAY

Love Missives Are Carried to Single and Married—Hearts Are Trump, Ask Andy Gump

COMICS FEW, DON'T BE BLUE

From bank presidents to scrub women, from most love-sick maidens and youths to those with the biggest grudges—they all are sending valentines this year, to judge from the reports of shopkeepers.

From gorgeous beribboned and be-laced corsage, to heart-shaped boxes to the weirdest of comic valentines, the missives are finding their way through the mails and by messengers to celebrate the old custom today.

The florists say they have never sold more gay and costly Valentine greetings. Flowers of radiant hue in beautifully formed bouquets carry the love messages. In the confectioners' shops there are no less marvelous things. There are heart-shaped chocolate candies with dainty sugar roses on them. There are heart-shaped boxes, Cupids and pretty maidens.

The art shops have had an unusual display of gay red and white decorations for the Valentine hostess. But best of all are the valentines themselves. The old penny comic is almost extant. But there are other comics that have proved popular.

Perhaps some of the present-day controversy on the question of manners and morals has influenced the author of the following verse found beneath the picture of a highly colored maiden:

"Those charms divine might well be satisfied
Without added whispers they are painted
And wrinkles filled with paste and paint
Are quite fitted for a saint."

There is another designed for a butcher to send to his sweetheart:

"Strong as an ox my love for thee,
Thou tender bit of veal;
Though small thine eyes, as pigs, they see
Quite well my love to steal.
The hast thou done, and something more
Deprived me of my sleep.
Then be kind, for shut the door
Against a hopeless sheep."

On the prettier, lacy ones, where Cupids, hearts and arrows commingle, there are such sentiments as these:

"The windows of your heart, dear
I would I might look through
And find a cozy little nest
Just big enough for two."

Those readers of olden legends will explain that St. Valentine's Day customs have degenerated. In Rome, long before there was any frivolous air about the day, there was the custom of choosing sweethearts. On St. Valentine's eve youths of the village gathered round a sacred urn and each drew out a name of a village maiden. This was virtually the same as a betrothal. The youth then had to purchase a gift for his lady-love on Valentine's Day.

For many generations the day has stood out as the one time when timid maidens might express their sentiments, although they were not supposed to attach their names to the love message they might gain courage to send.

In some of the public schools the children will have Valentine boxes today, and in many St. Valentine's Day will be the subject for themes and lessons. In churches, clubs and homes there are parties.

TO ASK NAVY YARD PROBE

Commandant to Demand Proof of Charges Against Girl Clerks

Substantiation of the charges made by Francis Ralston Welsh, criticizing the idleness of the women workers at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, will be asked for by Captain L. M. Nulton, commandant.

The charge was contained in a letter written to Congressman Blanton, of Texas. Mr. Welsh said he wrote the letter because of his interest as a banker in seeing governmental extravagance curbed. Informed of the action to be taken by Captain Nulton, he said he would gladly furnish all data in his possession.

"I have determined," said Captain Nulton today, "to ask Mr. Welsh that the report be substantiated. The whole letter is ridiculous. There are no more earnest, ready workers among the young women of Philadelphia than the girls at the navy yard."

INTERCHURCH MINISTERS JOIN FOR HOUR OF PRAYER

KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Father of Two-Week-Old Baby Is Victim of Accident

The death of Daniel J. Foster, of 521 South Sixtieth street, yesterday has left eight children fatherless. Foster was only thirty-three years old. He died in Misericordia Hospital after an automobile accident at Fifty-third and Walnut streets.

Samuel McCandless, of Fifty-seventh and Market streets, was driving the machine in which Foster was a passenger and J. M. High, of Norwood, Delaware county, was driving the machine that collided with his car. High and McCandless will be held for the action of the coroner.

Foster was an electrical contractor. The ages of his children range from two weeks to twelve years. The mother is living.

LIQUOR SYNDICATE SAID TO WORK HERE

Discovery of Carload of Whisky Shipped From City Starts Investigation

ALLEGED INFORMER SLAIN

From both the North and the South today came assertions that Philadelphia is the center of a vast whisky traffic that is pouring streams of liquor into New York and Washington.

A freight car wreck in the Baltimore tunnel some days ago caused railroad officials to investigate the contents of a car shipped by J. Hoffman, of Philadelphia, to Isadore Glasser, a Washington. In the car was found a cargo of old tires surrounding and safeguarding twenty-six barrels containing 2000 quarts of whisky, valued in the neighborhood of $20,000. This is the first freight shipment of whisky to be intercepted going into the capital.

From New York came the charge that southern moonshiners have been shipping their product to Philadelphia for distribution through New Jersey and for the New York consumers. It is alleged that most of it is sent into the small towns in Delaware or stored in farmhouses and gradually distributed from them by automobile and motor truck.

This charge was the upshot of investigations in connection with the shooting of Frank Walsh, Passaic and Newark bootlegger, in which the New York police have taken a hand. It was said that in some quarters the theory of his death is that he was giving information to the district attorney of New York and was shot to "stop the leak." It is known that the operations of men in Walsh's position have been on a large scale and that there are well-oiled organizations for distributing liquors.

This is pointed to by the Washington police as evidence that the Philadelphia shipper of whisky has a smooth-working organization at his command, else he would not dare to ship 2000 quarts to the District of Columbia; and that, having the organization, the expense of it makes it necessary that it be kept busy.

Following confiscation of the whisky Glasser was held under $2000 for a further hearing on the charge of "illegal possession and storage of whisky."

The transfer of cargo revealed the whisky, but it was allowed to proceed into the District after removal.

Attorney Whose Death Was Fatal to Widow Leaves All to Children

Among the wills probated at City Hall this morning was that of R. Loper Baird, attorney, 400 South Fifteenth street, who died February 2. His widow, Elizabeth H. Baird, named as one of his beneficiaries, died two days after Mr. Baird. The estate of $140,000 is divided among his children, Oliver H. Baird and Mrs. Charles E. Shull, and his grandchildren.

Other wills probated were those of Max A. McNally, 2546 Salmon street, $7500; James C. Taylor, 722 East Willard street, $7100; George W. Bates, 108 Gowen avenue, Mount Airy, $65,000. Emma Stevenson, died in Belle Vista Sanitarium, Chestnut Hill, $10,500.

Inventories were filed of the estates of Clayton E. Morgan, $25,022; Deborah B. Robinson, $67,835.64, and Joseph P. Spillisy, $28,628.71.

KNIFE AND PISTOL DUELS ENLIVEN MORNING HOURS

Challengers in Both Conflicts Go Down to Defeat After Battles With Police and Are Locked Up to Await Hearing

Meet Mr. Hart and Mr. Coach!

The names may not be familiar, but they are aspirants for the world's championship boxing, wrestling and dueling belts.

Last night, assisted, it is whispered, by a ghost named John Barleycorn, they brought battle and bloodshed to the Tenth and Buttonwood streets station.

"One round" Hart, who did not care to give his ancestral or present address, staged a duel at Vine and Darien streets about 2 o'clock this morning. His opponent, whose incognito was strictly maintained, has disappeared. Lacking swords, the warriors used penknives, and, oh—what they didn't do with those dangerous weapons.

Hart was carried, protesting his ability to go on with the fight, to the Hahnemann Hospital, where eleven stitches were taken in his neck, left eyelid, head and cheek.

But the biggest contest was staged at Twelfth and Olive streets shortly afterward. "Knockout" Couch, who claims exoteric Camac street as his home, defended his title against all comers.

Patrolman Powers, of the Twelfth and Buttonwood streets station, entered the ring with him first, claiming that he was too full of the forbidden "hootch," and endeavoring to take him to the station house.

Couch led with a blow to the left jaw and then clinched, grasping the patrolman's neck with both hands. On the break Couch again drove with his right and Powers countered with a blackjack wallop behind the ear. Couch again clinched and again employed the famous "strangle hold" known to wrestlers.

Powers measured his length on the street with Couch above him. At this time twelve other men entered the ring—at once. Couch struggled nobly against odds, but they were too many for him. He was finally sent down for the count, and away went his hopes for the title.

Four stitches in the Hahnemann Hospital patched him up sufficiently to allow him to be taken to the station house. There he met Hart. The two fallen heroes regarded each other sadly. Their fighting days were through.
